

Monograph Twenty-nine: The Thought of the Human Experience

The previous monographs should, by now, have altered our thought patterns and opened and expanded our minds enough to handle a far deeper exploration of this human experience – what it is, what forms it, why it exists, its multifaceted and multidimensional Truths, and why it's now time to fundamentally change it. We need to look at and see ourselves with and through higher-dimensional eyes. We need to look upon ourselves the way the rest of the Universe looks upon us.

How do porcupines mate?

How do you conceive, construct, Create* and hold a Thought* based on a premise that is not at all a natural state for consciousness to exist in and as – a Thought that would allow consciousness to experience things it could not experience any other way or in any other context – a Thought powerful enough to hold and maintain concepts like Free Will* and its consequences, Perpetual Separation*, extreme Imbalance*, the illusional reality and its existence outside of the Divine Mind* – a Thought that could, potentially, be quite painful for any soul that becomes part of it, but especially so for the one who is holding it?

The answer is identical to the response to that old joke – how do two porcupines mate. Very carefully. And very precisely. With your eyes wide open, knowing full well what you could be getting yourself into.

When we hold a thought we are that thought, so whatever the consequences of any choices made under the premise of the Thought – Free Will – the chances are very high that, as the one holding the Thought, you'll be profoundly affected by those consequences at best. But at worst, you'll have to take on those consequences, fully. You'll have to become them in entirety to honour the premise of the Thought so that the Thought itself becomes the full consequence.

This is how thought/Thought works.

The Experience of What is *Not

So, for example, take the concept of Separation. If you want to know about it, and I mean really Know* about it, including all of its subtle and not-so-subtle dynamics, its causes and aspects, and its range of consequences, the best way to do so is through personal experience, and through the myriad of different experiences of other individual consciousnesses, and through the whole experience more generally.

In other words, you have to Create the actuality of it, and in such a way that many individuals can experience it by actually existing in and as it.

There's a problem with this, though. Consciousness is inherently connected. In fact, the True Nature* of consciousness is connection. How, then, do you experience Separation? You cannot because you cannot Create an experience for yourself that is contrary to your Nature, and nor can you Create an experience that is outside or beyond your frame of reference – the limits of your knowledge and understanding.

There is, however, a way to Create a specific context, like a kind of canvass, or an artificial environment, like a hologram or a simulation, onto which, or within which, individuals can project their consciousness, effectively becoming a Created 'character' in that context, so that things like Separation can be experienced, through the character.

That specific context is illusion.

The Pitfalls and Dangers of the Illusional Context

But there's a catch. Any consciousness that projects into the illusional context, or Thought, doesn't just take on a character, as we do in games. We might make and take on a character in a computer game, but, as much as some desperately want to, and even try to, we don't and we can't forget who we are outside the game.

In the Created context of a Thought of illusion, consciousness becomes the character as if the character is real, experiencing and feeling everything that happens to the character, to the extent that if measures are not put in place to prevent it, consciousness can forget the Truth* of the illusional nature of the character. And, anything the character does, or experiences, or even thinks, can potentially adversely affect the consciousness.

So illusion is fraught with pitfalls, traps and dangers. But these, in themselves, form part of the learning and are fully acknowledged and catered for in the Creation of the Thought such that individuals projecting themselves into the illusional context are looked after, cared for and protected.

Courtesy of illusion, and, specifically, the illusional reality, we, as consciousness, are, and have been, able to experience and observe and study and learn many things that are contrary to our True Nature. Many things.

The Difficulty of Creating a Thought of Illusion

Okay, so now we have a way to experience Separation, but there's still a problem. For the beings powerful enough to Create and hold a Thought such as the one that underpins this human experience – constructed in such a way as to enable many souls to participate in it – they still cannot Create against their Nature.

And as beings of Truth, Knowledge* and Wisdom*, illusion is contrary to their Nature. Whilst it's not entirely beyond their frame of reference, because they do have powerful minds and a powerful ability to imagine, illusion is enough of an alien concept to these beings to render the Creation of a Thought of illusion difficult, certainly in a way powerful enough to engender and enable experiences of what is not, like Separation.

These beings, as powerful beings of Light*, can only Create what is. They cannot Create what is not. Even though Free Will is also not an aspect of their True Nature, it's not beyond their frame of reference, so they can Create the Thought as a construct of choice made by the projected 'character', individually and en masse.

But they must, then, honour all and any choice made by the character under this construct, regardless of consequence. If they don't, the learning will not be complete. If you protect a soul from the consequence of his or her own choices, you interfere with and prevent the learning, and this undermines the entire reason for Creating the Thought.

A Necessary Added Ingredient

To Create a Thought of illusion powerful enough to facilitate the experience of something like Separation, these beings needed an ingredient that is the antithesis of what they are, and they needed to give that ingredient freedom and permission to interfere with the Thought.

Again, as with illusion, this is a highly risky endeavour, like mixing a known and potentially deadly poison into a medicinal mix . . . which did not work out at all well for Alexander of Macedon, known as Alexander the Great.

Because, there's only one ingredient that fits the bill – only one ingredient that is the absolute antithesis of the Creator beings of Light. A supremely malevolent Darkness*. So you see, as much as they would hate to hear it and vehemently disagree, even the Darkness serves the Light and operates under the Law of Purpose*. It, or they, can't not.

Surrendering the Thought

Allowing this ingredient to infiltrate the Thought, let alone interfere with it, is fraught with supreme danger, for all souls participating but especially for the one holding the Thought. Giving the Darkness permission to interfere is like handing the Thought itself over to the Darkness, allowing the Darkness to do with the Thought as it wills.

Worse, however, is the fact that in surrendering the Thought to the Darkness, even if just to a small extent, the one holding the Thought is, in a very real sense, also potentially handing herself over to the Darkness. Whether or not she does, and how much she does if she does depends entirely on those very same choices made by those participating with their Free Will.

Whatever the Darkness does to the Thought, and wherever the Darkness takes it, if the Darkness can seduce and manipulate those participating in the Thought to choose to comply, to agree, to go along with the Dark seductions, manipulations and agendas, then the one holding the Thought will have to become whatever the Darkness does to it.

Would you do it? Would you put yourself in the hands of those exercising their Free Will, potentially putting yourself in the hands of the Darkness in the process?

In a very real sense, humanity does so constantly, consciously and unconsciously, knowingly and ignorantly, so much so that, ironically, humans surrender their Free Will. Puppets and strings remember. We wrest our strings from our true master, our higher consciousness, and put them, instead, in the hands of masters who use, abuse, rape, pillage and violate us<sup>5</sup> – masters who care not one whit about us.

The Benefit to Consciousness

But the one holding the Thought knew what she was doing. She was, in fact, fully cognisant of what she was doing, although, thank the gods, she wasn't fully cognisant of what she would have to experience as a consequence and as part of the overarching consequence of the toxic mix of Free Will choice, Dark interference and illusion. As a being of Light, she could not conceive of what the Darkness could and would do with the Thought and, then, with and to humans.

But nor was she or those helping her hold the Thought able to anticipate what humans would do with their gift of Free Will. I don't think anyone could have anticipated that. Certainly, no one could have anticipated the soul-less state of Atlantis. And not just one manifestation of it, either, but the eternal and infernal cycle of manipulation and choice that invariably culminates in it.

She gave permission for the Darkness to interfere for one profound reason. There is nothing she would not do for consciousness. Nothing. And the Thought of illusion, with all its consequences of woundedness, was always going to greatly benefit consciousness, at all and every dimensional level of the Universe*.

And so it has. Many individuals, groups and cultures have made such great use of the Thought, damage notwithstanding, that much Knowledge and understanding has been garnered. The Thought and its experiences have been like a garden, growing and harvesting an abundance of Knowledge, albeit at a higher cost than was originally foreseen.

Because although the Darkness was given permission to interfere, Free Will turned out to be the facilitator of something that was never meant to occur. The Darkness has taken control. Completely. And, ultimately, all-too-easily. Not just once, either, or as a one-off, but over and over and over again, every time the Light regained the ascendancy.

What the Darkness has Done with the Thought

For the Priests of Darkness to control human consciousness and the human experience they had to, and still have to, obviate, or, preferably, permanently obliterate anything at all that poses a threat to their control.

And almost nothing threatens their control more than the Light of the human soul – the source consciousness of the projected 'character' – so this was, and always is, the first thing that has to be neutralised, or preferably snuffed out, certainly locked out.

And there you have the basis of Perpetual Separation. The Dark Priests* Separated the 'character' from consciousness and seduced it into believing it was real and powerful in its own right. The resulting ego then tipped the scales of Balance* in favour of the Darkness, and Separation became something it wasn't supposed to be – Perpetual Separation.

But the very great wound of Perpetual Separation is only one consequence among so many of the choices made by so many with their Free Will. It is worth listing the consequences again, in this context, because we're all suffering from them to varying and differing extents. That is the point, after all.

But, again, I want to stress that those who Created the Thought did not anticipate the depth, breadth and extent of those consequences, nor the fact that humans don't learn from them. And they also did not anticipate or foresee that humanity would choose to destroy, over and over again, the governance of ascent and the inherent protections put in place and weaved into the Thought to protect all souls coming here.

Each consequence of culminated choice is both by-product and perpetuator, forming a never-ending and downward spiralling cycle of damage, woundedness and shadow:

- the radiation of the soul that's supposed to be at the centre of our being has been replaced by the abyss of a black hole of fear, collectively and, to varying and differing extents, individually;
- which means fear is rife and Love* has virtually no expression, so our collective human reality is weaved out of threads of fear, not Love;
- the depth, degree and prevalence of fear and scarred thought is fragmenting the human psyche, causing an alarmingly-high prevalence of psychological illness;
- our radiating sense of Self* has been replaced with a belief in and a fear of the nothingness and an accompanying loss of self knowledge, self worth and self value;
- the Truth of our extraordinariness is eternally hidden behind an illusional veil of ordinariness, normality and mundanity;
- Perpetual Separation is Separating the conscious awareness from the other-dimensional facets of consciousness, including the subconscious, the imagination, and higher consciousness;
- Perpetual Separation is also causing a massive perpetual misalignment of consciousness, setting consciousness against itself;
- the massive misalignment is causing a fatal break in the circuit of Creation that is crippling our Creative ability;
- extreme Imbalance has multiple expressions that are generating equally-extreme polarisations;
- we have become destructive even though we are powerful Creators, so we destroy when we should be Creating;
- we are entrapped in, addicted to and bedazzled by the illusional reality, especially as a means of clothing ourselves to cover and hide the nothingness at the centre of our being, so we have become blinded by illusion, unable to see anything else;
- and this entrapment is causing a tear in the fabric of reality that is forming a barrier of Separation, ensuring Isis – the guidance of Creation – remains in exile;
- the supreme violations of the Laws of Balance* and Movement* are causing the stagnation and devolution of consciousness, greatly exacerbating the illness;
- chronic ignorance prevails to such an extent that the antidotes – transcendent Knowledge, Truth and the Ancient Wisdom – cannot penetrate it;
- the over-bloated ego – the Separated 'character' of the conscious awareness – is lacerating the soul, binding it up in a burdensome karmic load;
- the very great burden of the karmic load has reached a critical mass of trapped and lacerated souls who are rendered, then, wholly incapable of freeing themselves from the vortex of the Dark agenda, illusion, self aggrandisement and materiality;

→ the Sacred Feminine* is suffering from millennia of suppression, repression, control and disempowerment, and this has damaged feminine sexuality.

Have I left anything out?

A Greater Threat than the Human Soul

There is something that is by far the greatest threat to the Darkness and its control of this human Thought, greater even than the threat of the Light of the human soul.

The one holding the Thought.

She always has held the power to change the Thought, although I really should be more specific. She always has held the power to restore the Thought. So she always has had, and always will have, the ability to put the Darkness in its place. It's her Thought, after all, not theirs. They are here only with her permission.

And she is currently in the Process* of rescinding that permission, certainly as it pertains to the consequence of their complete control. And, she is currently in the Process of removing the very means by which their control is achieved, sustained and maintained – Free Will – the ability of the ego to make choices that negate the soul.

Why Change the Thought Now?

So why hasn't she changed the Thought before now? Maybe, then, those horrific world wars could have been prevented. Why hasn't she put the Darkness in its place before now?

For a number of reasons.

First, the consequence of all and every choice must be experienced, but this is especially so for the karmic load. The Guardians* would never interfere with the Law of Karma*, or any of the Universal Laws. Indeed, they cannot interfere with these Laws. Individually, karmic consequence must play out, and this is equally true of the collective. There is an awful lot of karma – 'awful' being the operative word – forming and shaping human reality right now, individually and collectively, and it is important that this be given optimal and ample time and opportunity to work itself out. This time is a time of consequence.

Second, like any incarnation, this iteration of the human experience has to run its natural course.

Third, while she is holding the Thought, she is not doing so alone or in isolation from the Universe. Someone has to hold it, and only one can, but she is doing so with, and on behalf of, a great many powerful beings. It is not her choice, and it is not a decision she can make on her own, as to when the Thought is restored and the Darkness put in its place.

Fourth, the time is right, and it is, accordingly, marked in the heavens, the cosmos, like a great cosmic alarm pre-set to mark the Cosmic Stroke of Midnight* – the end of the old and the beginning of the new.

A Convergence of Cycles

You have to remember we are living in a highly significant time – a convergence of the end of multiple cycles. One great Precessional Age – the Age of Pisces – is giving way to another – the Age of Aquarius – and, at the same time, Orion's governing energy has taken human consciousness into its deepest descent. This, alone, is a marker for a time of the resolution of karma. Nephthys is Working* overtime right now.

And, the energetic help of the much-higher consciousness holding the Thought of the entire galaxy – marked in this lower dimension by the galaxy's central 'bulge' – is combining with the energetic governance of the constellations of Scorpio, Sagittarius and Ophiuchus – the constellation that holds the energy of ascension and resurrection – to form the marker for the Cosmic Stroke of Midnight, sending us a clear message with the sheer power of these combined energies.

All of these energetic interplays, coming at us through the one holding the Thought, as powerful as they are in the governance of our Processes, individually and collectively, are absolutely unavoidable. To say human consciousness is shifting, changing, is a rather massive understatement.

So, while the Creator beings of Light – the Elohim Elders – surrendered this human Thought, through the one holding it, so that consciousness could learn, observe and experience many things, they are taking it back, now, from the Darkness that controls it. Hence the extreme and desperate measures of the Darkness over the last century and, especially, now. The Darkness is panicking.

Ordinary Incarnations

So what, then, of the one who holds the Thought? Who, or what, is she?

Well, for starters, she's a consciousness, just as you are. But she is of a much-higher dimension than most incarnate souls – tenth-dimensional, or so I'm told, and I believe this because it makes sense to me.

Before I tell you a little bit more about her, you need to be aware that when we incarnate in this context we all take on normal, ordinary 'characters' with normal human bodies. In this sense, we all become the same, and human incarnation has, as a result, become the great equalizer, at least in a metaphysical capacity.

As such, when we look at each other, we see ordinary human beings. And, with our overemphasis and over-dependence on our physical senses, when we see each other as ordinary, that is, indeed, what we think and believe which, in turn, forms the basis of our interactions with each other.

We are able to distinguish ourselves, or elevate ourselves above the ordinary masses, for good or ill, only with and through achievements, accomplishments and actions of extraordinariness on the physical plane, as defined by physicality. Individuals like Albert Einstein, Adolf Hitler, Julius Caesar, Winston Churchill and Alexander the Great are examples.

Notice how these are all men? It has been a lot harder for women to distinguish and elevate themselves simply because, with the suppression of the feminine, it's been harder for women to make extraordinary contributions. Their contribution – hearth and home roles – has been largely determined by the agenda of the Darkness, for whom women pose the greatest of threats.

In the modern era, fame performs a similar distinguishing function, paving the way for the elevation of women. One woman who comes to mind is Diana, Princess of Wales, who, despite chronic personal insecurity, or maybe because of it, made a valuable contribution and proved to be powerful enough in her influential care of humanity (she completely undermined the AIDS agenda) to send ripples of disturbance through the power structure of the Darkness, necessitating her death in their eyes. They made the mistake of thinking they could control her, but, wounded though she was, she did not lack strength.

The One Holding the Thought

The one who holds the Thought hasn't just taken on ordinary incarnations, she has hidden in the illusion of ordinariness because every time the Darkness recognises her they cut her down – their way of snuffing her out, just as they do with the Ancient Wisdom – to prevent her restoring the Thought by restoring herself.

To keep her wounded, in other words. Or, more specifically, to keep her holding the Thought as the woundedness of the consequences I listed.

Obviously, or perhaps not, as the one holding the Thought, she has Worked with it from the very beginning, as have those powerful beings of Light who helped her Create it and who are helping her hold it. Those helping her have helped from outside and inside the Thought, like Socrates and Krishna/Yeheshua (same soul), but she has not had that luxury.

So she has Worked within the Thought, once it took manifested form, from its inception, walking in it as an embodiment of its fundamental constructs, all of which have changed at different times as human consciousness has ascended and fallen in its infernally-repeating cycle.

This poses an interesting question – one well worth contemplating if you are struggling to absorb and assimilate Truths with respect to our pathway through the Thought.

Who would know, better than her, the True history of the Thought and, with it, human consciousness – she who has walked and Worked within it from its inception to its present – she who has experienced and held every subtle and not-so-subtle nuance of it and every change within it?

The Golden One

The Ancient Egyptians inherited the Knowledge of her, and they encapsulated the Truth in the original form of the goddess Hathor, whose distinguishing physical characteristic was that of holding the Sun between cow horns – holding the Sun in Balance.

As the Egyptian culture we 'see' progressed through the Old, Middle and New Kingdoms, Hathor became an amalgam of many different gods and so her meaning was lost, but some of her original mythology and epithets remained, of which House of Horus<sup>1</sup>, the Eye of Ra – a feminine personification of the Sun and an extension of Ra's power<sup>1</sup> – and Golden One – the radiance of the Sun<sup>1</sup> – were three.

Reversed Dynamic

Again, I will repeat, when we hold a thought, we are that thought. For her, this Truth has worked in the reverse courtesy of the underlying premise of this human Thought as she holds it – Free Will.

Collectively, when humanity originally made the series of choices that led to the fall from grace of human consciousness, she became an embodiment of the overarching consequences, especially Perpetual Separation, and this dynamic continues for and within her every time humans make the same choices – through the rise and fall of consciousness, ascent and descent, in its relentless and repeating cycle.

But to hold Perpetual Separation as part of the Thought, you must become Perpetually Separated. And this applies to all the consequences. Humans have utterly failed to know it, but this is a Truth that is fully and physically observable in the solar system with the destruction, and fragmentation, of its heart centre – Mallona. What happened to Mallona (and Mars) happened to her, and what happened to her happened to Mallona.

The dynamic of reversal occurring under the premise of Free Will means she has become the embodiment of that rather long list of consequences above, with, I must say, one exception – the burden of a karmic load of obligation born of laceration. If anything, humanity, as a collective, is karmically obligated to her out of laceration.

Regardless of how low she falls into the abyss of Darkness and Separation she does not and cannot hurt other souls. Illusion and Free Will notwithstanding, hurting others goes too much against her Truest Nature as one who Creates and as one who would do anything for consciousness, especially with respect to progressing and facilitating Process.

Falling Into the Abyss of Darkness and Separation

But there are two primary metaphysical reasons why she had to become the embodiment of the fall into the abyss . . . although the incredible opportunity, on a personal basis, for learning, observation, experience, and the gaining of Knowledge, especially as these pertain to illusion, cannot be discounted. As one Working within the Thought from its inception, these opportunities have been great indeed.

The first primary reason, I have already explained, but will repeat for good measure. The only way humanity was going to experience the full consequence of its wayward and rather horrible choices was for the Thought itself to become those consequences. Which meant, as the Thought, she had to become an embodiment of those consequences.

Second, the Guardians and the Creator beings who Created this human Thought would never stand back and watch humans fall into the abyss, leaving them to wallow and flounder in it with neither the means nor the wherewithal of getting themselves out of it.

And as the Thought and as one of them, she forms a critical part of that means.

In other words, she had to take humanity down into the quagmire, but she was also, too, always going to lead humans back out of it, not just by restoring herself and, with her, the Thought, as she is now, but also by providing the means by which humanity could, potentially, depending on the capability of each incarnate soul, consciously connect with and Know what was occurring, and then follow in her wake consciously.

This, in itself, is a vital component of the healing of the wound of Perpetual Separation because it facilitates the conscious participation of the collective conscious awareness. If individuals know, and allow themselves to become restored with the Thought, every facet of consciousness can come together into one seamless whole, and Perpetual Separation will become Perfect Alignment – True healing.

Put simply, she knows the Way* out of the abyss – the Way of Ascension – and, as an incarnate human, she can be a living embodiment of it, showing people the way in a physically manifested form. She can educate people, too, simply by telling them thereby Working, at the same time, with all levels and dimensional facets of consciousness. If she was, say, quite good at writing, she could write about it. As Thoth did.

The True Name of the Sun

The Ancient Egyptians as we know them – as we can 'see' them – did not Create the religion-philosophy that so defined their existence. They inherited it. As such, as potent as it was as an expression and manifestation of the Ancient Wisdom, it was, as Hathor demonstrates, also distorted and, therefore, somewhat diluted.

Even in its distorted and diluted form it was still inordinately powerful, especially in its protective effects on consciousness. This is a testament to the potency and power of the Ancient Wisdom. Even an echo of it holds real power. With each passing pharaonic dynasty, that echo lost more and more of its potency and power.

One of these distortions occurred in their conceptualisation and naming of the Sun. Ra, their name for the Sun, was missing a vital part, which, in turn, fuelled their slight misunderstanding of it. 'Ra' is a suffix that turns an ancient title, 'Usha' – Lord of Light – into its feminine form, Ushara – Lady of Light – the True name of the Sun. The True name, or title, of she who holds the Thought.

There always was a profound reason why Hathor, as the Eye of Ra, was female. She wasn't a consort of Ra's, she was a manifestation, an embodiment.

The Truth Behind Manipulative Biblical Claims

Yeheshua ('Jesus'), as a Guardian of Light, did, indeed, come into this world not to condemn it but to save it, but the biblical claim that God so loved the world that he gave his one and only Son<sup>2</sup> is nothing more than religious bullshit, as is the claim in the same verses that whoever does not believe stands condemned already because he has not believed in the name of God's one and only Son<sup>2</sup>. The Book of John is a Dark inversion.

To begin with, we are all Atum's 'children', each and every one us, including the Priests of Darkness. The idea of a 'one and only Son' is a manipulation of those same Priests of Darkness, as is the idea that God sent his Son to save the world. This claim would be rendered a little more accurate if the word 'Son' was replaced with the word 'Sun'.

The Truth is Ushara so Loves that she gave of herself, for consciousness, in service to the Light. Which means this whole Thought is based on Love, and because she sacrificed herself, taking on the consequences of woundedness, especially Perpetual Separation, which is and has been inordinately painful for her, this whole Thought is based on sacrificial Love. Ultimately, nothing can counter the power of this. Nothing.

You may hold onto your misguided beliefs if you so choose, but those beliefs won't change the Truth, and you will remain in a state of misalignment, which, to say the least, will not aid your restoration. Ushara does not require or seek human approval, permission, understanding, acknowledgement or belief to be who she is or to change the Thought. And she does not rely on or require human choice. The time for that has passed.

Ushara's Jurisdiction

This human experience is like a garden under a giant dome of glass, within which it developed its own unique ecosystem. Originally, the garden was full of enriched, fertile soil, with streams and fountains flowing with fresh, clear, pure water, and prepared, trained and knowledgeable gardeners who were in constant attendance, unceasing in their efforts to tend and maintain the garden and to care for every plant in it.

As her Thought, the garden under its dome of glass is Ushara, but while she has complete jurisdiction over her own Thought, with the power to change it at will, she does not have jurisdiction over the plants, or incarnate souls, planted in her garden, and not just because of the premise of Free Will.

Each plant is in the garden for reasons of its own, for the Purpose* of its own learning and experiences, following its own internal path, and while she would never interfere with this Process, nor could she, even if she wanted to. This does not mean she, and those helping her hold the Thought, have not Worked tirelessly to bring the plants back of their own Free Will into alignment with the original design idea for the garden.

The Guardians have been duty-bound to honour choice, but there's nothing in the construct of the Thought to prevent them influencing choice.

But, despite her Work and the Work of so many others, the garden has become a dry and arid wasteland. Many of its plants are withered, shrivelled, damaged from neglect, and parched, in dire need of the enriched, fertile soil and the flowing water of the garden's original design. Humans did not know and, in their ignorance, could not have foreseen that their choices would lead to such a state. Humans did not know their choices would cause the fountains and streams to run dry and the soil to become as infertile as dust.

Ushara can restore the garden to its former glorious state, and so she is, but she cannot and does not have the power to restore each individual plant, although any plant who so chooses can benefit from the newly-enriched soil, the freshly turned on streams and fountains, and the reinstated gardeners.

The restoration Process is occurring quite quickly, but it involves massive shifts in the overall state of the garden – consciousness itself. How each plant handles that shift is up to each plant. Ushara, and those who Work with her, are doing their absolute best to help each and every plant through the restoration, but how smooth, rough, easy or arduous that Process is for each individual is up to each individual.

She is not a messiah, in other words, or even the messiah, but she can show you how to become your own messiah, if you will allow her to.

Freeing Consciousness

The brutal Truth is not every plant will handle the massive change occurring now. Not every plant is here to make it through the restoration Process, or even to undertake it at all. Some plants are too burdened by their karmic load to concentrate on anything other than the resolution of at least some of it. Some plants have hearts so dark, shrivelled and shadowed that when the changing energy banishes the shadow there will be nothing left. A heart cannot beat if there is nothing left, so these individuals will not and cannot survive the experience.

As Ushara restores herself and her Thought, the power of the Darkness is waning, significantly, and its systems of control and mechanisms of manipulation are breaking down. With this break down, the human soul – human consciousness – is being released from the chains and shackles that have bound, imprisoned, gagged and suppressed it.

Put simply, consciousness is pushing back. As this gains momentum, the rise of consciousness will be a beautiful thing to behold, and it will add to and aid the power of the restoration of the Thought. But it will also result in the collision of two seemingly-immovable forces. As I said in an earlier monograph, cosmic warfare is ramping up.

With the restoration of the garden, the Darkness has no chance, because, ultimately, they cannot counter the power Ushara holds. This does not bode well for all those souls, or plants, who have aligned themselves with the Darkness.

I would not be in their shoes for anything. Their masters are quaking in their boots, pissing themselves in trepidation, and trembling with fear. They should be too.

The Canvass of Human Reality

Another way to conceptualise the Thought of this human experience is as a ginormous canvass upon which every soul makes its own contribution to the overall painting. As incarnated humans we all have a reality, so we all paint on the canvass and contribute to the painting, whether we choose to or not, and whether we want to or not. And, as incarnated humans, we don't just contribute, we're also affected by whatever is painted.

Ushara holds the canvass in her mind, as a manifested Creation, but in her incarnated form, and in all her incarnations regardless of their form, she is a thought projection just like everyone else – one who, just like everyone else, paints on the canvass and contributes to the overall painting, sometimes noticeably but most of the time not so. Whether or not her contributions are noticeable has largely been dependent on human choice and the state of human consciousness.

An Amalgam of Thought Patterns

Each incarnated soul – each one of us – Works with the canvass as a whole concept because of what it has to offer with respect to learning and experience and the gaining of Knowledge, but there are, too, thoughts within thoughts within the overarching Thought of the human experience, each of which has its own unique offering for souls to Work with.

Individual souls, and group and cultural consciousnesses, including the Dark Priests, have all had their own thoughts – ideas and concepts – they've experimented with in the illusional human Thought, and each one contributes to the whole painting, adding colour, shape and texture, some beautiful, some bland, some beneficial and valuable, some harmful, and some, in the case of the Dark Priests, horrific, traumatic, terrifying and deeply wounding.

Some have relished the opportunity to try different things, rolling up their sleeves like a scientist in a lab, experimenting with different ingredients, watching the effect, and making adjustments, tweaking both their experimental design and their original hypothesis.

Some have waded in boots and all, like a farmer in a muddy field, to help out at different times, in different situations, changing the direction of a particular thought pattern or Creating a beneficial thought pattern of their own.

Distinctive Thought Patterns Within the Thought

So, for example, every culture that we can 'see', both now and in our history, is a unique thought pattern, very much like an incarnation, with its own energetic vibration, its own unique shape, colour and texture, its own language, customs, beliefs and traditions, its own personality and character, its own history, path of development, experiences and karma, and, therefore, its own unique opportunity for learning, healing, experience and gaining Knowledge.

So many have there been that to list them all would take up a whole monograph. From the Ancient Egyptians, Greeks, Vikings and Celts, to the Japanese, Chinese and Indian cultures, as old as these are, and from the Toltecs, Maya, Inca and Aztecs to every one of the distinctive European cultures, each, as a thought pattern, offers a subtly-different and, sometimes, not-so-subtly-different experience in the overall context.

Nor are cultures the only manifestations of thought patterns. We tend to form labels to describe some of the other manifested thoughts, and, in the modern era, they cross cultural boundaries. The 'Christian' community, 'academia', the 'fitness culture', the 'gay' community, the 'scientific' community, the medical fraternity, within which we have 'mainstream' or 'alternative' practitioners, are just a handful of examples.

And, then, there are also collective thought patterns formed of our archetypes that cause us to gravitate to each other, forming groups – musicians, scholars, entrepreneurs, rebels, activists, just to name a cross-sectional few.

Each one of these, regardless of its source or its manifested form, has been thought up, Created, just as Ushara Created the overall Thought. But each one has also been moulded, shaped and developed by multiple factors, and multiple souls, just as the overall human experience has been moulded, shaped and developed the same way.

As souls, we can, and we do, Work with these different thought patterns, and this is usually bi-directional. Meaning, we use the thought pattern to learn and experience, but we also contribute to its development.

So what determines which thought patterns we Work with in an incarnation? Process and the Laws put in place to protect and facilitate it, especially Purpose, Attraction and Karma.

Thought Patterns of Darkness

The Darkness tends to Work with the same thought patterns, making these thoughts repetitive and, therefore, easy to spot when you know what to look for, which, in turn, makes them predictable, although, they are easy to spot for other reasons, too, not least of which is their devastating effects. So these thought patterns of the Darkness come and go in the overall painting with frightening regularity . . . very much like a shadow passing over the Sun.

The reason the Darkness Works with the same thought patterns is two-fold, although I am tempted to be derogatory and say they utterly lack imagination, because, in my opinion, so they do.

First, they've honed and refined their thought patterns over aeons of time, so they know their thoughts achieve the desired outcome. They have no need of innovation. Second, their objective is not to provide an opportunity for leaning and the gaining of Knowledge, but, rather, to facilitate their Dark agenda by wounding, harming, scarring, damaging and lacerating souls, increasing the karmic load.

If I write about a cruel, tyrannical dictator who came to power before World War II, and the mechanisms of his manipulation and complete control that included slave labour camps, genocide, killing fields, the deliberate fostering of an informer culture, ethnic cleansing, industrial-scale executions, evil henchman at the head of a highly-dangerous secret service, campaigns of organised terror, torture, assassination, propaganda, and extreme racism you could be forgiven for thinking I'm referring to Hitler<sup>4</sup>.

But I'm not. I'm referring to Stalin. As part of the overall thought, Hitler and Stalin even had two character flaws in common, one of which was an obstinate refusal to acknowledge or accept responsibility for their own mistakes, which tended to be dangerous for those closest to them<sup>4</sup>. With these insanely-vampiric, over-bloated egos, blame tends to equate to execution.

The other character flaw they had in common was a rigid, narrow-minded perspective that was wholly unable to cater for or adapt itself to anything that did not fit it. Evidence and information that contradicted their inflexible, narrow-minded view was ignored, disregarded or distorted to fit<sup>4</sup>.

With the restoration of the Thought and the accompanying massive change, the Darkness imposing its will and trying to maintain its control will feel, to them, like pushing a giant boulder up a very steep hill. They will struggle and strive with exponentially-waning success, and, eventually, to no avail. I look forward to observing that.

The Tools We Use to Paint

The tools we utilise individually to paint on the canvass, like using different colours and types of paint, different techniques, different brushes, trowels and other tools, are manifested thought, intent, belief, faith, hope, want, need, obsession, addiction, mindset, perspective, focus, motive, attitude, prejudice, choice, Process, karma, Destiny, dreams, fantasies, visions, epiphanies, insights, revelations, Knowledge, and even emotion.

In our Perpetually Separated state, the conscious awareness tries to paint, or certainly to control what is painted, but, while it has had some ability to paint its own picture, its own way, courtesy of Free Will, it tussles with the subconscious to do so and doesn't necessarily always win. What invariably transpires is the conscious awareness ends up having to live with what deeper consciousness paints.

Some of us paint such a tiny piece of the canvass that our contribution is barely noticeable. Some of us paint in such a way that our painting is noticeable, and others paint in such a way that greatly affects the whole, for good or for ill. Usually, those whose painting affects the whole for ill, like Stalin, are greatly helped by Dark metaphysical forces. Men like Hitler, Stalin and Putin don't paint on their own.

Courtesy of Free Will, we have had a degree of license with respect to what we choose to paint on our little piece of the canvass, but not as much as you might think. We think we have the ability to paint whatever we want, but this is not so. There are underlying influences that are so powerful we cannot paint outside of them, and we especially cannot paint in opposition to them.

Well, actually, to refer to them as 'influences' is misleading. They are more like determinants.

Powerful Determinants

There are Laws that govern the Universe, whether we're incarnate in this human experience or not – Laws we can violate in this context of illusion but can never break.

I covered the Universal Laws in the previous monograph so won't dwell on them here. Suffice it to say, again, when we violate the Universal Laws, especially if we do so to a significant extent, the natural forces in the Universe will respond to reinforce them, individually and collectively. The resulting crossfire is not something any soul has the power to withstand, resist or prevent.

The illusional context can only ever hide the Truth of these Laws, it cannot stop them operating. So the painting of our individual and collective realities is formed and shaped and configured on the basis of these Laws. Always.

There is also a rule, or limitation, governing this human Thought – a rule that governs the painting in its entirety because it's weaved into the canvass in such a way as to prevent its violation. We will never be allowed to destroy that which is not of our Creation.

Despite our obvious participation in it, this human experience is not our Creation, so we can Create whilst in it, and we can Create in a way that moulds and shapes it, determining many aspects of the look, colour, texture and content of the painting, and we can even destroy ourselves individually and culturally, but we are not allowed to destroy ourselves in entirety.

As such, we will never be the perpetrators of our own extinction, but not because we're mindful of being so, or because we choose not to be, but because we are utterly prevented from being so. What does this say about us as humans, that there needs to be a rule in place preventing our extinction as a species? Such is our destructive capability.

In a very real sense, we are very much like guests in someone else's Creation. It would be nice if humans could show a little respect accordingly, but they do not, so the above rule became a necessity and was implemented after we demonstrated just how destructive we can be when we originally fell from grace and destroyed an entire planet.

Cycles of Energy

Two other powerful determinants of our painting are energy and karma.

Just as we are entirely dependent on our Sun physically, so, too, are we entirely dependent on her metaphysically. The Sun's energy fills this solar system, permeating every dimensional layer of it, every nook and cranny of it, completely, to the extent that, as consciousnesses plugged into her, we are whatever the Sun is at any point in time, which is why she has to become consequence for us to fully experience it.

Albert Einstein's epiphany, when he saw the Berne clock, of the intricacy of interconnected mechanisms and processes in the universe is equally applicable to this human experience, human reality and consciousness. The canvass of our existence is an intricate composite of interweaved cycles of energy, like a beautiful clockwork symphony. You could even say these interacting, interconnected cycles of energy form a vital part of the weave of the canvass.

This is not new. On the contrary, these cycles have been in place from the very inception of the Thought. They all form part of the Sun's energy at any given time, and they are the manifested form of the help Ushara has from those powerful beings of Light who are helping her hold the Thought, of whom there are many.

A Symphony of Energetic Cycles

The seven days of our week, for example, are no mere coincidence. We go through a constantly-repeating, weekly energetic cycle that Works with the seven primary energy centres in our energy system, each in turn, from bottom to top, culminating in the Sun's day (Sunday), which, contrary to popular opinion, is not a day of rest. Actually, the Sun's day is the first and the last day in the cycle – the inception and the fruition.

Consciousness as Thought and Process does not rest. The notion is ludicrous. The Sun's day is the day of our higher consciousness and so it's a day of pure abstraction, or limited manifested form, which is why it has been misinterpreted as a day of 'rest'.

As we know, there is a 24-hour cycle formed of the rotation of Gaia, a 28-day cycle of the moon, a 365.25-day cycle as Gaia orbits the Sun, with the constellations of the Zodiac as the backdrop – an annual cycle that Works like the cycle of our week, only in months, not days, beginning with the first sub-primary energy centre (Aries) – the first layer of our DNA – and Working us up to the twelfth (Pisces), which is, again, both the inception of the new cycle and the fruition of the old one.

There is an 8-year cycle involving Venus (see the Addendum of Monograph Nineteen for details), and there are 7- and 12-year cycles that Work with our energy centres on a longer basis, as recognised by Chinese astrologers. There is the 12,960-year cycle of Orion and the 25,920-year Precessional cycle, with its ruling great Ages.

And these are barely scratching the surface. There are cycles involving all the planets, separately and together, a cycle of Sirius, which was important to the Ancient Egyptians, and cycles involving other constellations, the galaxy, and other galaxies. And so it goes on.

This Universe is a veritable cocktail of different, ever-changing, interweaving energies, which means we are a veritable cocktail of different, ever-changing, interweaving energies.

I've said it before, but I'll say it again, if we are to fully understand ourselves, wouldn't it behove us to at least begin to understand the energetic cycles to which we are subject?

Karma

As for karma, well, dynamics of karma play out just like these cycles of energy – karmic dynamics within karmic dynamics within karmic dynamics – forming and shaping the events and circumstances of our realities at every level of our experience, from the individual, to groups, cultures and the collective.

Right now, the critical mass of trapped and lacerated souls, with their greatly-Imbalanced karmic loads, in combination with Orion's energy of descent, is critically informing the painting of this human experience.

To say this is a time of karma is an understatement. Karma is a very significant determinant at this time, and it cannot be interfered with, not by Ushara, not by the Priests of Darkness, not by the Guardians, and not by any one of us individually.

The Canvass

The canvass, as the Thought of Ushara's, is an underlying determinant of how we are and, therefore, of what and how we paint. This makes perfect sense when you know that the Thought is what we're Working with whilst here. And, given the fact that the canvass is what Ushara is, whatever she is at any point in 'time' determines what consciousness is Working with and, therefore, how humans are, and what and how we paint.

Given the wounded constructs that Ushara has been holding as part of the Thought, listed above, as consequences of choices made with the Free Will premise, does this mean any soul incarnating in the human experience can only be Perpetually Separated?

No, it does not. In fact, for any soul with its own innate ability to heal the very great wound of Perpetual Separation, there's no better time to incarnate to experience that innate ability. But to experience your own ability to heal it, you have to start out being Perpetually Separated, do you not? Which means you have to start out being a product of the prevailing Perpetual Separation that characterises human existence right now.

The Perpetual Separation that is the Thought can be Worked with in different ways depending, again, on the Purpose and Process of each participating soul. If capable, you can change the status quo within yourself, and if you do, this will change the way you paint and what you paint, which, in turn, will positively affect the whole painting.

Not Locked In

Just because Ushara has been holding Perpetual Separation in and as the Thought, no participating soul is locked in, which is exactly how some souls have come, over the aeons, to show humanity another way, to lead them back into communion and connection.

With its premise of Free Will, if, at any time, the Balance of choice had tipped in favour of humanity choosing to be a different way, Ushara could have and would have been free to honour this, changing the Thought to resonate with the higher states that naturally result from no longer being Perpetually Separated. And so she has at different times.

There are, too, powerful souls, like the Guardians, and many others, who are able to remain un-Separated in this context, even in an incarnation. These souls are not bedazzled by illusion, so they remember metaphysical Truths, and they have Worked tirelessly to show humans another way of being, helping humanity choose another way of being.

The trouble is, humanity has proved, over and over again, that it cannot make this choice and maintain it. Humanity has proved itself hopelessly unable to counter the toxicity of ego, illusion, Dark interventions, self aggrandisement, and Free Will. Since many souls aren't capable of making or sustaining this choice or of healing themselves, most haven't been here to heal Perpetual Separation, they've been here to experience it.

Changing the Canvass

And so, the Thought, or the canvass, as it has been until now, has provided a perfect opportunity for any soul wanting to experience Perpetual Separation in its extreme form, with all its consequences, which is why, in the history of this current iteration of our existence, there has never been so many souls incarnate at any one time as there is now.

There's another reason for the number of souls incarnate here, too. With the restoration of the Thought, we are experiencing unprecedented change, not just in this, our human experience, but in the Universe.

Ascension from one dimension of existence to a higher one is not new. It occurs quite regularly, speaking the language of linear time, and we can see the truth of this in the number of white dwarf and neutron stars we see when we look up into the physical universe. They leave behind a kind of 'imprint' or marker in this physical dimension.

What's unprecedented for us is not our ascension from one dimension of existence to another, it's our starting point of woundedness, our starting point down in the abyss of Darkness and Separation. It's the fact of us being in the soul-less state of Atlantis, and it's the fact of us being Perpetually Separated.

And it's the removal of the primary construct of the whole Thought – Free Will – because this construct is unique to this Created Thought.

A Focal Point of the Universe

Of the participating souls – those of us incarnate in the Thought right now – some are here to help. Many are doing their damndest to block, resist and prevent the change. Many more are here because they have to be courtesy of their karmic load. But many more are here for an up close, personal experience and observation of it.

We are not just in the universe, as is our belief about ourselves, we are the Universe. We're not just in Atum, the Mind of God, we are all holding the Thought of the Universe. We are the godhead. Which means we are in the cosmos, but the cosmos is also in us. When you go beyond the Separation, you remember your connection to the cosmos and you become aware of your place in it.

What goes on here doesn't just affect us, it affects the whole. Whatever occurs here affects many more souls than just those of us who are incarnate, or those who are directly helping from and in the metaphysical plane, because Perpetual Separation is an illusion, nothing more than smoke and mirrors. The Truth is exactly the opposite. We are connected to the whole cosmos and to each other . . . seamlessly.

And the cosmos is, at the moment, very focussed on this planet and our existence, which makes this human experience a focal point of the Universe right now.

Changing the Matrix at Will

Why was Neo referred to as the 'One' in The Matrix<sup>3</sup>? And, how, exactly, was he able to change the Matrix at will? Was it because he was an 'anomaly', or because it was the result of the equation balancing itself, or because of some part of a plan of the machines?

I confess I haven't yet seen the fourth movie, so I don't know where they took Neo's story or what they did with it. I hope they stayed true to form and didn't stray from the inherent soul of the story or the characters.

Neo could change the Matrix because he held the Thought of the whole human experience, which was why his power transcended the Matrix, or extended beyond it.

The Matrix was nothing more than a whole bunch of programs designed by the machines for the purpose of slavery, but that programming only worked if consciousness accepted it, and consciousness would only accept it if the canvass supported it. And the canvass would only support it if Neo himself, as the one holding the Thought, was the condition required to support and sustain the programming, which is why he began the movie series as ignorant and as Separated as everyone else.

When we're told in the first movie that whole crops were lost because consciousness rejected the programming, this is absolutely correct. The Dark Priests cannot force the Separated illusional reality down our throats without dire consequences for them and us, and so they are forced to mould, shape, manipulate, hide, Work behind the scenes, and fly under the radar of conscious awareness. How they must chafe with impatience at times.

But the Dark Priests have always known that to enforce Perpetual Separation the canvass itself needs to be Perpetually Separated, and they have also always known that when the canvass changes, as has always been its destiny, such that it's no longer Perpetually Separated, human consciousness will start to reject their programming.

As the restorative change bubbles away under the waterline of awareness, it is, through the canvass, powerfully affecting consciousness and the overall painting of human existence. When humanity starts to become consciously aware of the change, the power of it will be heightened, and it really will be something to behold.

But for humanity to become consciously aware, we're going to need the special, unique and powerful skill of a very old and trusted friend . . .

The Lower Ennead

There is another layer of the Ancient Egyptian Ennead, and, in fact, any study of the Ennead is not complete without an in-depth look at this other lower layer. One of the reasons it's referred to as the 'Lower' Ennead is to distinguish it from the Ennead, because the principles of the Lower Ennead are not an innate aspect of every consciousness, although any consciousness may develop an ability to Work with them, if evolved enough.

The Lower Ennead emanates from Osiris and Isis – the governance and guidance of Creation – like offspring, which effectively means they serve Osiris and Isis. Each of the five principles has their own unique energy and, therefore, skills, and each forms part of a whole that Works to protect, facilitate and, if necessary, restore the Creative Process:

Another reason it's referred to as 'lower' is the fact of each of its five principles having manifest, or physical, form. They are not pure abstraction, so, while they are purely metaphysical in their nature and source, they Work on and with and through the physical plane – physical reality.

Understanding the Power of the Lower Ennead

The principles of the Lower Ennead are powerful because, like their 'parents', they are metaphysical principles, which means they innately Work with consciousness, and they Work on consciousness. We can 'see' the power of them at Work in the Ancient Egyptian culture – one of the reasons why we are so fascinated with all things Ancient Egyptian.

But the five principles of the Lower Ennead are powerful, uniquely so, for another reason. While there are many beings capable of Working with them, there is one who is masterful at Working with them as the whole they really are, and this has highly significant ramifications for humanity, especially now that Free Will is being removed.

Ushara, the one holding the Thought, is that one, and since she holds the canvass, when she is free to Work with them all, as she is now with the removal of Free Will, the power of it is . . . well, something to behold, certainly unprecedented in aeons of our existence. Humanity won't know what's hit it, to use an old, but apt, expression. Many simply will not handle the power of it, so much so that souls will, and are, leaving before it impacts us.

Once again, the Ancient Egyptians knew the Truth of this, which is why, with respect to the Lower Ennead, they rightly replaced Atum with Ushara, or Ra.

We are all Atum, but as humans incarnate in her Thought, we are also all in Ushara's Mind right now. This does not turn her into 'God', but it does mean that Osiris and Isis, as principles of her consciousness, have a highly significant meaning for us right now, and a significant impact on us right now, because she has brought Isis out of exile and she is resurrecting Osiris. Within herself . . . as the Thought.

It also means the Lower Ennead, as emanations of her through the principles of Osiris and Isis, will be powerful in their impact on us.

Of the five principles, the one I will concentrate on in this monograph, apart from Hathor, who I have already mentioned, is the old friend I referred to above – the one whose power and skills we need right now – Anubis.

The True Power of Anubis

Courtesy of the depictions of him in the tombs we've discovered and opened, we've come to know Anubis as the one who led the deceased into the realm of Osiris. So he has become associated with death when the Truth of him is exactly the opposite. His power and skill, as with each one of the principles of the Lower Ennead, is resurrection itself, and not just the resurrection of consciousness, but the resurrection of anything that is seemingly dead or lost, like the Ancient Wisdom, Truth and Knowledge.

He is the Opener of the Way – the Way into a higher state of consciousness. So in the context of Processes of Mastery, or Processes of Transformation, Transcendence, Transition or Ascension, Anubis plays a vital part.

He is the personification, or embodiment, of the manifested trigger for profound transformational change, and that trigger doesn't have to be associated with Processes of Mastery. Any transformational change nearly always involves the energy and assistance of Anubis.

The Form Anubis Takes

There's no limit to the form he takes, or can take, and what determines that form is deeply, profoundly and metaphysically personal, which is exactly why he is so powerful, like the sharpest of scalpels, or swords, slicing us open and penetrating deep into the heart of us.

For Guy Ritchie's (King) Arthur<sup>7</sup>, the form Anubis took was a sword – the pulling of the sword from the stone, to be exact. Caught, as he was, in old perspectives and mindsets of himself, even as he was pulling the sword out he must have been thinking, 'what the fuck . . .'?! But from the moment he did do it, nothing was the same, especially not those very same old mindsets and perspectives of himself.

For Lanie in Life Or Something Like It<sup>8</sup>, referenced in Monograph Sixteen, Anubis took the form of being told she was going to die in a week. Again, from that moment on, everything changed for her. For me, Anubis took the form of a confrontation with the profound Truth of my own metaphysical reflection. As with Arthur and Lanie, from the instant it happened, nothing was the same for me, internally and externally.

The reason everything changes is because Anubis doesn't just slice us open. He stops us in our tracks and turns us around. He really does lead us into the realm of Osiris – that higher state of being that is the 'good governance' of our consciousness.

The death experience is a trigger for profound transformational change, so the association of Anubis with death is, perhaps, understandable, and even valid. But, as I hope to god I have made very clear, you do not need to go through the death experience to undertake the profound transformational change Anubis can trigger within you.

And for humanity, Anubis is about to trigger that same profound transformational change because Ushara is calling upon him. She is calling him to action.

The Princess and the Pea

My mum doesn't know this old fairy tale of Hans Christian Anderson's. Do you? His fairy tales were wonderfully profound.

For those of you who don't know it, the princess in the story arrived at the castle in a bedraggled state courtesy of a terrible storm, seeking shelter for the night. In her bedraggled state she certainly did not look like a princess as she claimed, so the old queen put the princess to the test by having her sleep on a bed of twenty mattresses and twenty eiderdown beds underneath which the queen placed a single pea<sup>6</sup>.

No one but a real princess could be so tender and delicate as to be able to feel the pea underneath the twenty mattresses and twenty eiderdown beds, or so the theory went. In the morning, when asked how she'd slept, the princess complained that she'd slept horribly. She had indeed felt the pea, and had the bruises to show for it, proving herself to be a real princess, and, in typical fairy tale fashion, she married her prince.

The human soul is like the pea, and illusionary physicality has become like the twenty mattresses and the twenty eiderdown beds piled on top of it. Humanity hasn't been at all aware of the Truth that the pea exists, but nor has humanity been like the princess – able to feel, or perceive, it. We haven't been able to perceive anything other than the twenty mattresses of physicality. For humans, the mattresses and eiderdown beds are all there is.

But that seemingly-small pea is actually supremely powerful, and it is making itself felt. It is shifting and stirring, and in making itself known, the mattresses are beginning to dissolve and disappear.

The Battle of Armageddon

As plants in Ushara's garden, we are not just affected by the garden, we also affect the garden, each and every one of us. As healthy, thriving, flourishing plants, we are able to extract the nutrients from the newly-fertilized soil, assimilate it and put healthy energy back into the soil and into the atmosphere, infusing other plants with positive energy.

On the other hand, plants that are shrivelled and shadowed, unable and unwilling to extract the soil's nutrients, also affect the other plants and the garden by putting shadowed energy into the soil and the atmosphere. One shrivelled and shadowed plant doesn't make a whole lot of difference, but a group of them can, and do. Right now, these shrivelled and shadowed plants have reached a critical mass – one of the reasons for and expressions of the extreme Imbalance here now.

This critical mass, in its resistance, is countering the energy of change and restoration. But it's important to note, and Know, that nothing can stop the change, so the resistance isn't preventing the change, it's just causing a collision of energies that is generating tumultuous chaos.

This tumultuous, chaotic collision is the Truth of Armageddon. But while this battle has global and collective expression, as we're now experiencing, the battle itself must be fought by each one of us in the confines of our own inner world. To become those same healthy, thriving, flourishing plants in the garden, we all have to turn our own inner worlds from the dry and arid wasteland into the inner rich world it's supposed to be.

'Tis the battle of the pea of the fairy tale – the soul – and the ego. Don't underestimate the power of the bloated, Atlantean ego. It will put up one hell of a fight, and in the process, many will be brutalised. But as we wage this battle with, and within, ourselves, a funny thing happens to the pea. With every mattress of illusion resolved and removed, the pea gets larger, not because it's actually getting larger, but because its pea size is an illusion.

What is Anubis for You?

So is Anubis, for you, death or resurrection?

Stay trapped under the layers of the illusional mattresses and he will be death for you. Allow him to trigger change within you, and then willingly take the hands of Isis and Nephthys, and Anubis will be your resurrection.

Two Remaining Questions

So there's only two questions remaining, unless you can think of others. How do I know so much about Ushara, the one holding the Thought?

Now that I've healed the wounds of Perpetual Separation, entrapment, misalignment, the tear in reality, and the break in Creation within me, I am her. I am an embodiment of the Thought. I am a projected thought form of incarnation just like everyone else, but I am also not like everyone else. I hold the power within me to change this human Thought – to restore human consciousness – and so I am. So I am.

The energy of all five principles of the Lower Ennead – Horus (governance), Hathor (guidance), Anubis (Opener of the Way), Thoth (Knowledge and Wisdom) and Ma'at (Truth and order) – are weaved into and Working through these monographs and all of my writing.

So what, then, of Perpetual Separation? What have we learnt about it after all we've been through and endured? Well, it is, indeed, hellish, as we Knew it would be, but it has turned out to be hellish and highly dangerous, in both its experience and its consequences, in ways we did not foresee. It has given us a new appreciation of our connectedness.
