

Monograph Twenty-five: Our Fall From Grace

Falling out of union and communion with God – our rightful heritage – is a pretty big deal. God did not banish us, or exclude us, from this, our rightful state of being. We banished ourselves. We chose to take ourselves out of that paradisaical union and have been suffering for it ever since. If we know Knowledge is our salvation, and our resurrection, then perhaps it's time to sweep aside the trite clichés we've been spoon fed via the institutionalised religious texts. So if we didn't eat fruit from a forbidden tree of Knowledge, then what did we do to cause ourselves to fall out of paradisaical union?

The Loss of Ancient Knowledge

So many of the myths that appear in the Jewish Talmud and the Christian Bible are vital for us because they really do hold transcendent Truths* that we lost long ago, left behind in the mists of antiquity when the ancient priesthoods were destroyed and the records they meticulously kept were stolen.

Losing the transcendent Knowledge* in these ancient myths has damaged us because the chronic ignorance left in the wake of its obviolation has facilitated the very great wound of Perpetual Separation*, causing us to lose vital parts of ourselves and to lose our way.

As I've already said, the Jewish and Christian religions came directly out of Ancient Egypt, so they hold the essence, much distorted, of the Ancient Egyptian religion-philosophy and Ancient Egyptian mythologies. If we sweep aside the dross of dogma, institutionalisation and, especially, literalisation there is a lot of value in the mythologies we've inherited through these religions.

The Garden of Eden Myth

And it just so happens that the Garden of Eden myth<sup>1</sup> is one of the most important. It was designed, in the first place, to hold a most vital Truth, but that Truth has been so twisted and bent out of shape we are no longer able to connect with it.

This is, of course, exactly why the Priests of Darkness* concentrated their efforts on the redaction of this myth, excising much of it, writing their own Demiurge into the lead role, and distorting, inverting and maligning much of the beautiful symbolism contained in the myth. The myth would have been discarded if possible, but its inclusion was necessary to incorporate some sort of answer to that most profound philosophical question – who are we and where did we come from – into their religious systems to authenticate them.

So the myth as we've inherited it today contains powerful Truths and equally powerful lies. Untangling the complicated web of Truth and lies in this particular myth is vital for us now, at this point in our collective evolution, as is the necessity of sweeping aside the trite cliché this myth has degenerated into.

We've reached a point in our evolution where we must connect with that most vital Truth the myth was designed to hold and convey. We must know and confront the Truth of our past and, specifically, the Truth of why and how we originally fell from grace and then continued this pattern throughout the aeons of our existence.

Many of us were there originally, which means we fell and have never re-ascended. We fell into near-pure materiality and have not managed to find our Way* back to that union with the Divine from which we originally came. Many were not there, which means those souls fell subsequently, but for those of us who were there originally, we have traversed the long, long road of human existence, walking the long road of consequence.

Sweeping Aside Trite Clichés

The human penchant for turning things into trite clichés is unfortunate because once something becomes a cliché we stop thinking about it and start, instead, taking it for granted. This means clichés become blockages, preventing the movement and flow of thought, and they become boundaries beyond which we don't bother exploring. As such, clichés close our minds to the knowledge that will and can take us beyond them.

We are not in Sunday school anymore, so it's time to go beyond trite clichés, not just with respect to this most important of myths and the other of the biblical myths we absorbed as children but also with respect to so much of the programming and dogma of the institutionalised religions, especially as it concerns our relationship with 'God'.

'God' as presented to us in the institutionalised religions is a gross misrepresentation of Divine Consciousness*. Actually, he is a darkly- and manipulatively-twisted distortion.

Ironically, it's time we stopped engorging on the rotten fruit of ignorance and actually ate of the fruit of Knowledge once again because doing so will open our eyes to many more Truths we need to confront, which will, in turn, trigger the transformation of our consciousness, which will, then, set our feet on the journey back to the union and communion with Atum (God) that is our rightful state of being.

Transcendent Knowledge is the key to our release from bondage and slavery. In transforming consciousness, Knowledge prepares us, like prepared soil, to receive and accept the seeds of the Ancient Wisdom*, and so Knowledge will play a vital role in our resurrection from the death of entrapment and the restoration of our rightful heritage.

The Apple and the Serpent

The first step in restoring the Garden of Eden myth to its original form must be the restoration of the beautiful symbolism it contains. You might not agree, and that's perfectly okay, but, to me, the two standout symbols in the story are the apple and the serpent, so these are the obvious starting points.

The ethereal or energetic field (not our 'aura') that surrounds us, similar to the magnetic field that is supposed to surround the Earth, is one way of conceptualising the soul itself. It's what the soul looks like when we're incarnate, in other words. When you depict this energetic field as two-dimensional it strongly resembles a butterfly, but when you depict it as three-dimensional, as a solid, so to speak, it strongly resembles an apple<sup>2</sup>.

The serpent is a supremely powerful symbolic representation of Wisdom. When we see serpents, or snakes, in our sleeping dreams, the subconscious is sending us a warning – one that should not be ignored – to watch the wisdom of our choices and actions over the coming days.

The serpent is also powerfully symbolic of the activation of the physical and metaphysical energy centres, from the base of the spine to the top of the head, that occurs in a spiritual awakening. A Kundalini (snake in Sanskrit<sup>3</sup>) awakening is one that awakens and releases the latent female energy (intuition) that lies coiled at the base of the spine<sup>3</sup>.

The interaction between the serpent and the feminine in the myth is, therefore, wonderfully accurate and transcendently true for us, regardless of whether we're male or female in our incarnation. As we awaken we are able to partake of the apple that opens our eyes to the existence of, and our connection with, the soul itself, our higher consciousness, the part of us that is a powerful fragment of God (Atum).

Far from falling out of God's favour by allowing ourselves to be beguiled by the seductive, whispered words of the serpent and partaking of the apple, the myth is detailing for us the way back into union with God as Divine Consciousness.

The Vital Importance of Sacred Feminine Energy

Feminine energy is a most vital energy, and we as a collective have been supremely damaged by the suppression of it, not just because masculine and feminine energies are so out of Balance*, violating that most sacred of Laws*, but also because we have suffered from the loss of the vital contribution and guidance afforded us by this energy.

The deliberate maligning of women in the redaction of the biblical Garden of Eden myth places the fault of the fall of man (or men) squarely at the feet of women thereby justifying the belief in women as Jezebel's – shameless, immoral<sup>3</sup> temptresses – which, in turn, has justified and validated the suppression, control and condemnation of women, not just in our institutionalised religions but in our society generally.

In controlling and maligning women, the Dark Priests* were particularly targeting women who showed any signs at all of being priestesses, natural conduits of healing, higher-dimensional energy, and they were also targeting feminine sexuality for the same reason. Thus were women dishonoured and negated. This had, and still has, a two-fold effect of disempowering the power of women, especially priestesses, and, courtesy of judgemental, condemning mindsets, preventing the people from acknowledging, absorbing and heeding their guidance, rather like a condom worn over consciousness itself.

Binding Women to Hearth and Home

Another more subtle but insidiously-damaging portrayal in the myth is the creation of the woman by God second, as nothing more than the man's mate, even using one of his ribs in the process. This elevates the man in importance to God and, at the same time, downgrades the importance of women.

It's clever, and our modern institutionalised religions have used it with varying degrees of implacability and severity to bind women to hearth and home roles – roles that serve men. These binding roles are like chains and fetters around sacred feminine energy, consuming focus and dictating perspective. Thus has the world, the collective, been deprived of the power of feminine energy turning its focus in other directions, applying itself to other pursuits.

This is still how we exist today. We have not healed with respect to the extreme Imbalance* of masculine and feminine energies. These energies are very much still dangerously out of Balance, and will remain so until women authentically reclaim their power from within, not by punishing or condemning men. Again, part of our healing, as women, is the acknowledgement that we have allowed ourselves to be suppressed.

Ironically, the cultures of the ancient world venerated the sacred feminine over and above the masculine. The cult of goddess worship was far reaching and widespread in the ancient world<sup>4</sup>. Far from being primitive, these goddess cultures, like the Harappan culture of ancient India, were highly evolved, agriculturally developed, artistic, creative, accomplished builders, with organised societies within which individuals were well off, and, most significantly, peaceful, not warring or warlike at all<sup>5</sup>.

The Polar Opposites of God as Demiurge and God as Divine Consciousness

How can we disobey rules that don't exist? It's impossible, isn't it? In paradisaical union and communion with God as Atum – Divine Consciousness – there are no conditions placed upon us for us to continue to dwell in heaven. We are accepted as we are, and we are acceptable as we are. It never was God as Atum who banished us from our rightful place of being, our heritage.

On the other hand, nothing is guaranteed to piss off God as the Demiurge of the fabricated institutionalised religions of the Dark Priests more than the serpent leading us to the fruit of the soul, especially through the sacred feminine.

Nothing angers that god more because nothing threatens that god and his systems of control more than the Knowledge of the soul, the higher-dimensional aspect of our consciousness, and the Knowledge in the soul – the apple in the myth.

For this reason, the Dark Priests had to malign Knowledge itself, and they had to interweave the seeking of Knowledge as sin – the original sin, actually – into their redacted version of the myth. Turn Knowledge into sin and what remains? The chronic ignorance that, today, forms the bedrock of the edifice of modern existence – the Devil's Playground.

The fact that God as Demiurge laid curses at all is very telling, very revealing. By its fruit shall ye know it. And his curses were legendary – cruel, vindictive, harsh and unforgiving. Such a god does not care one whit for people or their souls. His full-on melt down, his out-of-control temper tantrum, is the epitome of the reaction of an over-bloated ego not getting its own way, and this is always a response to one thing, and one thing only: fear.

The Polar Opposites of Fear and Love

Again, this, in itself, is very telling. It allows us to know that the Dark Priests do greatly fear us reconnecting with our higher consciousness and re-establishing our communion with God as Atum. They are deeply afraid of that.

And, in fact, this is also obvious in their predictable but deadly responses to the spot fires of the Ancient Wisdom that flared into life at different times in our recent history. They obsessively, violently, implacably stamped out those spot fires in their campaigns of eradication – a fear response if ever there was one. Actually, it was very much like panic.

This is well worth bearing in mind. The Priests of Si'il are Darkness, so they fear, too. They exist in fear and they operate, completely, out of fear. They are fear, which is why they foster it to feed off it. Fear, Love's* polar opposite.

God as Atum is Love, and so, Atum does not judge or, for that matter, lay curses. And, Atum would never withhold the Knowledge from us that is our rightful heritage. Never.

Fear needs ignorance to survive and thrive, but Love flourishes in Knowledge. It really is that simple, which is why the Bible is so right when it says by their fruit shall ye know them.

Tragically, as obvious as the polar-opposite characteristics of Love and fear, and, therefore, God as Atum and God as Demiurge, are to some of us, humanity as a collective is utterly woeful at distinguishing between the two. Thus has humanity been tricked and seduced into worshipping God as Demiurge – God as Darkness. The irony of it never fails to escape me. Humanity is worshipping the Devil, in more ways than the obvious one, too.

Nakedness

I wrote about the symbolism of nakedness in the previous monograph, and, in fact, now that I've finished it, I think Monograph Twenty-four is possibly the most important of them all. Nakedness, in the myth, symbolises innocence – an existence free of the corruption of fear, or, an existence free of the necessity of hiding fear and hiding from fear.

This aspect of the redacted myth is, tragically, true. When fear in the form of the shadow of ordinariness, inadequacy, worthlessness and, especially, nothingness replaced the Divine Light* of the soul at the centre of our being, and, therefore, our sense of Self*, we did, indeed, and we still do, desperately cover our nakedness with the clothes of the illusionary reality. We use those clothes to feel worthy, to hide, or mask, our inadequacy.

In the redacted myth, God as Demiurge helped Adam and Eve with this, forming clothes out of animal skins so they could hide their nakedness and hide from their nakedness. Whilst true, this part of the redacted story also nicely and conveniently physicalises, or literalises, the concept and, therefore, the symbolism of nakedness.

The nakedness of Adam and Eve – humanity – had nothing to do with the body and everything to do with the psyche, especially the unconscious part of our consciousness, and, specifically, the shadows and fear dynamics that exist therein.

The Garden

The garden itself is symbolic of spirituality, our spirituality. All the metaphors associated with gardens are beautifully applicable, from rich and fertile soil within which consciousness thrives and flourishes, to the seeds of newly planted thoughts and thought patterns, to the starvation and deprivation that comes from a lack of water (Truth) and nourishment (Knowledge) and fertile soil (Wisdom), to the weeds of shadowed thoughts that don't belong there, and that choke the life out of and over-run the garden.

The most important aspect of the garden itself in the redacted myth is that God as Demiurge threw us out of it. He banished us, and so he did. No being, god or otherwise, has the right to banish us from the garden of our own spirituality, collectively or individually.

But, like lambs to the slaughter, we gave the Demiurge power over us and allowed ourselves to be banished, not just once, either. On the contrary, this god continues to keep us locked out of the garden of our own true spirituality. This god laid his curses upon us originally to cause our banishment, and to cause us to believe we could be banished, and he continues to perpetuate those original curses, blocking us from finding our way back.

Take a moment and consider your own answer to these most vital questions. Have the institutionalised religious systems of this Demiurge brought us back to, or even anywhere near, the paradisaical re-union with Divine Consciousness (Atum)? Have they showed us the Way? All they've succeeded in doing is foster the belief within us of our own sinful unworthiness to look upon the face of God, let alone dwell in communion with the Divine.

This means these religions are using and perpetuating the very great fear of unworthiness and nothingness and inadequacy that lies at the heart of the collective soul, our collective consciousness.

Divide and Conquer

But, then, there is another sinister Purpose* of the religions of the Demiurge, is there not? A powerful one. All the old adages apply, from the clichéd but very effective strategy of divide and conquer to the old saying, united we stand, divided we fall.

The institutionalised religions have set us against each other, even generating conflict within those religions, not just between them, and they have, over the aeons of our existence, handed the Dark Priests and those who serve them the perfect means of stirring up violent conflict and leading us to war against ourselves.

It is a measure of the chronic ignorance that infects us, like a fatal disease for which the cure is within reach, that I even have to write this. Divisiveness, conflict and violence, and judgement and condemnation are never the fruit of Love. These are always the fruit of Darkness and fear. How can Love stir up conflict when it is all-embracing?

Falling from Heaven to Earth

Many of the ancient myths from many of our ancient cultures speak of beings – gods, angels, archangels, watchers and others – who fell from heaven to earth. Courtesy of our very strong tendency to physicalise everything, especially ancient myths, we interpret this as if these beings were like meteors falling out of the sky and crashing into Earth. Indeed, people have interpreted some of these myths as meteors falling from the cosmos into the lap of the Earth.

In this, our modern era, we only know one state of being, speaking generally, but in the ancient world, this was not the case at all. The priesthoods knew of and practiced higher states of being, and it was entirely natural for them to commune and communicate with beings who were purely higher dimensional, not physical at all. The priesthoods were, therefore, direct connections with the gods, able to speak for and on behalf of the gods.

Over time, with the demise of the priesthoods and their Knowledge of transcendent being and with the agendas of institutionalisation and literalisation, lower and higher states of being became Separate* and Separated, and they became synonymous with 'earth' and 'heaven'. The implication of the Separation of these two meant that an earth-bound existence, or incarnation, automatically precluded a heavenly, or higher, state of being.

So these two have become, now, mutually exclusive, not because they are, but because we believe they are. What's worse is the fact that the Separation of these two states has been further exacerbated by the erroneous belief that we have to die to go to 'heaven'.

To clear up these erroneous constructs, any individual who achieves a higher state of being from a lower one is said to have ascended, akin to the ascension from earth into heaven. Conversely, any individual who descends, for whatever reason, into a lower state of being from a higher one is said to have fallen, akin to the descent from heaven to earth.

The Ultimate Sacrifice

To be very clear, we do not need to die to go to heaven, but ascending from the lower state we exist in now into a higher state of being is arduous, painful, potentially dangerous, and takes effort, dedication, application, discipline, especially mental discipline, an open mind and heart, intelligence, and years of training and preparation, all of which were absolutely facilitated by the temples of the ancient priesthoods.

And, those souls who deliberately, consciously fall to earth from heaven in order to help and guide humanity – a necessity given humanity's fallen state – are making the ultimate sacrifice, falling out of a state of being that is normal, natural and supremely harmonious into one that is absolutely, in every possible way, in opposition to their Truest Nature*.

The sacrifice Yeheshua ('Jesus') made was not in dying on the Roman instrument of torture but, rather, in coming here in the first place and falling into a lower state of being, temporarily existing in the state of entrapment – the actual, original, or True, symbolic meaning of being nailed to a cross.

Where We Began, and Where We've Ended Up

And so, as a collective consciousness, we did, indeed, fall from a higher state of being into this Separated lower one. Obviously. Because here we are.

The biblical Garden of Eden myth is right about that. It's right about where we began and it's right about where we've ended up.

But if we know the serpent, the woman and the apple are the cure, not the cause, then what the heck really happened to cause us to fall from grace?

The Few and the Many

To begin to understand more about the nature of our original fall – the whys and wherefores – we only have to sweep our eyes back over our recent history – the history of this current iteration of our existence – keeping in mind, as we do, the Osirian myth of the Ancient Egyptians. This myth spells it out for us very clearly and so facilitates us looking back on our own past with newly-opened eyes.

Humans are always Set's co-conspirators, seduced by god-only-knows-what, usually wealth and power and status, to commit the most heinous acts. These acts lacerate their own souls, which Set never bothers to let them know, but the ramifications go far beyond their souls. The consequences for the human experience in its entirety and, therefore, for each one of us individually are beyond horrific. Obviously. Because here we are.

Not all of us participate, but all of us are forced to live the consequences. Never the many, only the few who are seduced, bought, owned, controlled, tricked, beguiled. In the myth, 72 was all it took to help Set kill Osiris and make it impossible even for Isis, with all her power, to restore and resurrect him. But that was enough. Obviously. Because here we are. Osiris does not rule here, Set does.

It is never the many who choose to go to war and, yet, it is the many who pay, who suffer the consequences of death, destruction, grief, trauma and terror. The real problem for us all is that those who assist the Darkness over and over again are usually, not always, only aware of the physical ripple effects of their choices and actions, and so remain wholly unaware of the metaphysical ripple effects.

The Metaphysical Ripple Effects of the Choices and Actions of the Few

One man, really, set out to bring down the Druidic cultures of Gaul and southern Britannia, slaughtering millions of Celts and enslaving millions more in the process. In doing so, he ripped a part of our soul out of this human experience. Far from being just a chapter in our history textbooks, to be studied and marvelled at, the metaphysical ripple effects of Julius Caesar's actions are still being felt to this day.

But the army that was his instrument, without which he could not have conquered Gaul, comprised legions of normal, ordinary men. Why did those men participate in genocide? Were they just following orders? Did they think to reap some of the glory, conquering yet another territory for Rome?

Likewise, it was just a handful of men who brought down the Cathar culture in the Languedoc over a thousand years later, slaughtering thousands in the process. In doing so, they ripped a part of our soul out of this human experience. Far from being just a chapter in our history textbooks, the metaphysical ripple effects of the Albigensian Crusade are still being felt to this day.

Simon de Montfort's rabble mercenary army was their instrument, without which they could not have begun the vile and violent process of wiping out the Cathar culture, and this army comprised normal, ordinary men who participated in the Cathar genocide for money, perhaps a little bit of excitement, and the deceptive promise of a fast track into heaven<sup>8</sup>. Tricked, deceived, seduced, manipulated.

The Cathar and Druidic Wisdoms, and the Gnostic and Manichaeic Wisdoms in the Middle East, effectively dealt with by the three infamous crusades of the middle ages, the ripple effects of which are still being felt physically as well as metaphysically, were potentially our means of finding our way back into heaven.

Although manipulated into doing so, humans were fully culpable in destroying these Wisdoms thereby robbing the collective consciousness of these most valuable pathways back into union with Atum. This is a Truth that must be faced and confronted. Just the few is all it takes to tear down something precious . . . every time.

But, the few are enabled by, and, therefore, symbolise, the overriding loss of Balance in the collective. This is important because it allows us to know that we are all culpable.

The Tragedy of What We Do with Free Will

So it should come as no surprise that our original fall from a higher dimension into this lower dimension was somehow similar to the examples above. And so it was, only, the examples I referenced above all occurred here, on this physical plane, in this Separated third dimension when we were already fallen.

What made our original fall different, and so powerful and catastrophic, with such far-reaching consequences, was the fact that it caused us to fall from one dimensional existence into another – a lower dimension we were *not Created** to exist in and as.

Had I not personally witnessed it, and been a part of it, I would have sworn a fall of such magnitude was impossible for a collective consciousness. Individual ones, yes, absolutely. That makes perfect sense to me when I see the intent individuals hold, and what they are, then, capable of choosing and of doing out of that intent. But the whole collective? The whole thing? And, in the end, so easily accomplished.

In this sense, we all shoulder the burden of karmic obligation born of that original fall, not because we necessarily chose it originally but because we are all perpetuating it. Right now. All of us here now are shouldering the burden because all of us are playing our part in perpetuating an existence in Atlantis. All of us are keeping all of us out of the garden of paradisaical re-union with Atum . . . until and unless we're not.

Heaven and Hell

So significant was our original fall that we can say rather than falling from heaven to earth, we skipped a level and fell, instead, from heaven into hell.

Contrary to the dogma of institutionalised religion, heaven and hell are not mythical places we go to after death depending on our behaviours in this life, like a T junction, going left into hell if we've been naughty girls and boys or going right, into heaven, if we've been good. What is 'good' anyway, and who decides when God as Atum does not judge?

Hell is not our punishment, it is our consequence. One we chose. And choose.

Ironically, we encounter these 'T-junction' choices through our entire incarnations.

Heaven or hell are states of being we exist in at all times, but since they are polar opposites, we exist in one or the other, never both. When we don't exist in heaven, we are in hell because, rather than being a place of fire and brimstone, hell is the absence of all those beautiful characteristics of a heavenly existence, our rightful state of being.

The greatest tragedy for us is not so much that we chose to fall out of heaven into hell, it is that we continue to choose to remain in hell. This is what we do with the gift of Free Will*. Oh the things we do with our Free Will . . . . the things we do . . . !

Hamstrung by an Inability to Grasp Metaphysical Dynamics

Falling into this Separated lower-dimensional existence as it is now (Atlantis) has, to some extent, happened in stages, by degree, like falling down rungs on a ladder, over aeons of existence and multiple iterations, culminating in the Propaganda Experiment of World War II that has very effectively exacerbated our descent into hell. But the act, or circumstance, that caused our original fall from a higher-dimensional existence was, and needed to be, profound and severe and significant.

And so it was.

Understanding the ramifications, or consequences, is the easy part primarily because we're living them, and because, again, we can sweep our eyes back over our history and see what we've lost and what we've suffered. But understanding the dynamics of why and how we originally fell is a lot harder simply because we suffer from the Separation that causes us to see only the physical nature of a thing, any and everything, precluding our ability to grasp the metaphysical dynamics, especially the dynamic of multi-dimensionality itself.

Both our sight and our conscious intellect are hamstrung by our inability to perceive and conceptualise beyond the physicality of our existence, especially as we see it around us, right now, in the form it's in. But in explaining what occurred I can only write about it in terms of the metaphysicality of it because I am directly accessing my own memories, which are themselves purely metaphysical.

This, you need to understand right from the outset. Unless you've significantly transformed your consciousness beyond that of the zombie state, you will struggle with the generalities and the specifics of the whys and wherefores of what occurred, but I promise I will do my best to help you understand.

So, having warned you, here goes . . . .

Eternally-Repeating Patterns

Our original fall from grace occurred in two parts, like two opposite sides of the same coin, and every time we achieve a higher state of being that could potentially restore us and then we fall out of it again, so, too, do these falls occur in two parts, with the second arising directly out of the first simply because the first makes the second possible.

Or, even more accurately, the second becomes a physical manifestation of the first. Or, expressed another way, the second is the consequence that ripples out in and through the fabric of our reality.

The first of the two parts, or stages of our original fall, is, at least partially, relatively easy to understand because it comprised, and continues to comprise, choices and actions that we can see physically and have continued to repeat down through the aeons.

Such is the eternally-repeating pattern of our existence – the proverbial needle stuck on the damaged record of us – the eternal and infernal cycle of the unresolved karmic dynamic to which we are subject and from which we cannot break free.

Two Sides of the Same Coin

The second side of the coin of our original fall is anything but easy to comprehend because it was, and still is, directly born out of both the physicality and the metaphysical dynamics of the first part.

In that sense, the second part of our fall from grace was pure abstract metaphysical consequence and physical consequence rolled into one, but a physical consequence that has been deliberately hidden from us, even though the evidence of it is right here, screaming at us. And even though we continue to suffer from this very same physical consequence over and over again, as the ancients well knew.

The Truth of this has been deliberately hidden from us and is the very reason why it was so vital to the Dark Priests that they destroy the records of the priesthods of Ancient Egypt in particular. The Ancient Egyptians were so meticulous in their record keeping and the Knowledge contained therein that they personified the concept of it, and worshipped that personification as a god of the Lower Ennead, Thoth. And they could be meticulous record keepers because Egypt itself was, and still is, perfectly geographically placed to avoid the cataclysmic destructions that typically end the iterations of human existence<sup>4</sup>.

In other words, those records survived catastrophic devastation and were then added to with every devastation experienced. This makes those records tens, even hundreds, of thousands of years old, speaking the language of illusional linear time – beyond ancient.

Mourning the Loss of Alexandria's Library

This is also why the Dark Priests and those who serve them targeted Alexandria so ruthlessly again and again until the Light of Alexandria was well and truly snuffed out. Again, the cosmopolitan melting pot of Wisdoms and recorded Knowledge in Alexandria, of which the legacy of the Egyptian priesthood was paramount, offered a pathway for humanity back into Divine union. Such a powerful melting pot was this that the veil separating the dimensions of human existence became very thin in Alexandria, as it did in the Druidic cultures.

Please don't bemoan the loss of these cultures and the ancient records, for these are, in Truth, not lost. Whilst we must face the Truth of our past, our vision must, now, take us into our future. What is done is done, but it can be undone if we maintain our vision and focus. We can undo these past wrongs right here, right now. We can re-establish these nourishing, enriched cultures of our past. And, many of us hold the Knowledge contained in those ancient records within our souls, in our DNA, as genetic memory.

Genetic Memory and Knowledge

I was never interested in The Hunger Games, as movies, when they were released a decade ago, and so I didn't watch them. But last night, I watched the second movie (Catching Fire<sup>12</sup>) and was utterly gobsmacked by the power, the specifics, and the accuracy of the symbolism, the imagery, the numerology, and the story line. I sat immobilised for a long time after the movie finished, because I Know it doesn't just hold Truths about our human experience, past and present, it is our Truth, depicted symbolically.

Likewise, when I read the Divergent trilogy<sup>9</sup> many years ago I Knew it absolutely holds the Truth of our past and present, especially with respect to the tampering with our DNA.

So how is this possible? Well, there are three quite distinct possibilities, all of which we need to Know about. Two are part of the agenda of the Darkness, and one is a principle of the Light. Or, the Light of Truth.

Agendas of Darkness or Principles of Light?

Many people Know the Darkness mocks us by weaving transcendent Truth into its movies, and then they of the Darkness laugh at us as we dismiss these Truths as nothing more than entertainment, fantasy and 'science fiction'.

Many people also Know that those who serve the Darkness believe they must release these Truths into the public arena, or tell us, in an absolutely-futile attempt to alleviate their karmic burden. They think to circumvent the Universal Law of Karma and to sidestep the fundamental Nature of consciousness, which, of course, is absolutely impossible. 'Tis pitiful, really, as they are about to learn, the hard way.

The third reason why these Truths are weaved into books and movies is the one I prefer to focus on, and it's the one I passionately believe in. We are accessing our genetic memory and transcendent Knowledge through the powerful portal of the imagination. And, even more vitally, we are unleashing the power of Creation we hold within us.

We can send ourselves into a tailspin, trying to identify which is the underlying, or operating, premise with respect to the Truths in our movies, but we really don't need to. Regardless of whether it forms an agenda of the Darkness or a principle of the Light, Truth is Truth. All we need do is acknowledge these Truths and then allow them to open our eyes, inform our perspectives, and determine our beliefs.

The Dry Sponge Effect

So if Truth weaved into movies is an operating principle of Light then, given their absolute control of Hollywood, why does the Darkness permit these books and movies to be released into the public sphere, or domain? Wouldn't this be a highly dangerous exercise for them if these Creative expressions could, and would, and do, powerfully touch the human soul, stir it, and set us questioning and seeking answers?

The answer to this last question is yes, it is a highly dangerous endeavour. But here's the really wonderfully-fascinating thing about Creation – the answer to the first question. The Darkness cannot touch, alter, fight, or counter the power of it. The best they can do is try to suppress the Creative force, but, first, it cannot ultimately be suppressed, and, second, when Creation is unleashed they are rendered utterly helpless against the Nature, the force and the power of it.

And, something else we need to Know. Creation uses fear and the Darkness itself to perfection, but the same cannot be said of the Darkness using Creation. They cannot Create, which is exactly why they need us so desperately. They can only manipulate the physical plane by manipulating us, specifically, our thoughts, beliefs, and mindsets.

Why were the books and movies of the Divergent trilogy and The Hunger Games so popular? Because, as with Dan Brown's The Da Vinci Code, the Star Wars series, and even the Twilight series, our collective consciousness soaks up and absorbs the metaphysical Truths and transcendent Knowledge in them the way a dry sponge absorbs water.

Our Beating Heart

Returning to our original fall from grace, the physicality of what occurred as the first side of the coin – our initial banishment – was, unsurprisingly, the deliberate destruction, or tearing out, of the beating heart of the human experience – the multi-faceted Elohim-Guardian Priesthood* and the innate protections weaved into this human Creation.

To aid an understanding of the significance and importance of this original Priesthood, we must, once again, sweep aside the trite clichés of mythology embedded in the dogma of our modern religious systems. The Demiurge of those religions did not Create the human experience, he usurped it. And he used this original Priesthood to usurp it.

When first the human experience was Created – our Zep Tepi or First Time* – those who Created it guided and watched over their Creation not from the outside but from within. They walked among humans, not as gods and goddesses but as Priests* and Priestesses*, forming the core of this original Elohim-Guardian Priesthood.

This Priesthood was so powerful and of such pure spirituality that we cannot, now, conceptualise it, and no priesthood since has rivalled it, although some have come close.

The Potential Dangers of Free Will

This is not unusual for a Created civilisation, to have the Elohim and the Guardians walk within and among it, as a constant part of it. But what made the human experience so unique, rendering the constant presence of the Elohim a necessity, was Free Will.

The Elohim knew the risks they were taking in making Free Will the premise of human existence, but the learning potential was worth that risk. Whilst they do not exist with or in Free Will, they are still very well aware of the potential pitfalls and dangers of it.

Their presence is truthfully represented in the biblical Garden of Eden myth, although obviously distorted by the need to write the Demiurge into the lead role, replacing them, as I said earlier. Such was the state of human consciousness in this, our First Time, that the Elohim Guardians could walk among humanity in their True Form*, not hidden or disguised within incarnated identities or by the clothes of the illusional reality because there was no such thing as the illusional reality and nor was there such a thing as the Separated character identity (the ego).

The Pure Power of Osirian Governance

This Priesthood was not just humanity's innate Connection with Atum, and, indeed, the Universe, forming the very healthy, beating heart of the human experience, as I said. It was also a pure, potent and powerful manifestation of the synthesis of Osirian governance and the guidance of Isis. No wonder the original garden was so healthy, thriving and paradisaical.

Under Osirian rule, any existence is a temple in entirety with the Priesthood governing, and the Creative force is powerful because it is what it truly is, something to behold. We now have no ability to conceptualise Creation as it should be, or could be, nor are we capable of conceptualising a culture, a society, able to Create at Will, in perfect harmony and resonance with Divine Will, honouring Divine Purpose.

We now no longer know of Higher Will let alone how to connect with or honour it. We only know how to pander to the lower egoic will – the whims and wants of the ego – and we are lost in the haze of illusion. So there is a fatal break in the circuit of Creation that utterly prevents us consciously experiencing and exercising the power of Creation as it exists within us.

Not so in this First Time. As with Adam and Eve, it did not occur to humans they could exist any other way. There was no other way. This truly was the Age of Innocence.

During this First Time, humanity lived long lives, many thousands of years, and illness, disease and pestilence were all but unknown, and were healed quickly and effectively if ever they did occur. Pollution and corruption were complete unknowns. There was, simply, no such thing. War was utterly unheard of. Really. War, violence and conflict, deprivation, starvation, abuse, and exploitation simply did not form part of the fabric of human reality in this, our Zep Tepi.

Along Came a Shadow

And, then, into this garden of paradisaical existence crept a Dark, malevolent shadow, insidious, devious, manipulative. It offered something seductive, not the fruit of Knowledge but, rather, power – the empowerment of the individual ego.

As is typical of Set (Satan), this Darkness did not bother explaining to those it seduced that the power it offered was completely illusional. Nor did the Darkness bother explaining either the ultimate cost of this power to the soul or the fact that the price would have to be paid across many, many lives lived, over and over again. The Darkness never bothers to disclose these kinds of Truths, such is its deceptive, manipulative True Nature.

The Darkness promised those who served it the power to exist outside of Divine Will, the power to exercise one's own will and to exist as one wanted to exist. As per the puppet analogy, the Darkness convinced those who were seduced by it that they could wrest their strings from their master and take control of those strings for themselves, writing their own stories, 'free' to pursue whatever they craved and desired, even if, again, that freedom was entirely illusional and, ironically, came at a very high price.

Thus was the Age of Innocence ended, and human consciousness became dangerously Imbalanced. Knowledge was not our undoing, ignorance was. Nothing's changed.

The High Price of Slavery

What the Darkness utterly failed to disclose, and still fails to disclose even to this day, is that in wresting our strings from our master – higher-dimensional Consciousness – to control them ourselves, we do not control them. Instead, we hand the control of our strings directly to that very same malevolent Darkness.

In doing so we become slaves twice over. First, we become slaves to the Darkness, to be used and abused as the Darkness wills. But, second, we become slaves to our own base, or lower, egoic whims and wants, all of which are emitted by and from the black hole fear at the centre of our being – the void where our sense of Self and our radiating Divine Consciousness should be. Thus do we become slaves to fear.

Some of us are slaves to the Dark agenda merely because we are suffering from that same disease of chronic ignorance and so we're at the mercy of what the Dark Priests have orchestrated here, but many more are bound into slavery far more powerfully, selling their souls directly and, therefore, control of their consciousness. If enough do this, a critical mass is achieved. And the chronic Imbalance significantly tips in favour of the Darkness.

Honouring Choice

Typically, just a group of individuals was all it took to destroy this original Priesthood. Also typically, this group raised an even larger group, or army, capable of murder and massacre. Like a pack of rabid dogs, they moved against the Priesthood, just as Simon de Montfort's pack of rabid dogs moved against the Cathars. Again, is this not portrayed to absolute cinematic perfection with the destruction of George Lucas's Jedi?

As with his Sith, the human experience being higher dimensional in this, our First Time, the Si'il – the Priests of Darkness – did not have to fully and physically incarnate, so they themselves were able to actively take part in the massacre of the Priesthood because they, too, could and did walk among humans in their True Form, albeit shrouded. They used the Priests and Priestesses of the original Priesthood as fodder for their satanic rituals of blood sacrifice and black magic.

As higher-dimensional beings, and as powerful as they were, why did the Priesthood allow themselves to become fodder for these black magic rituals, because it's important to realise they did do exactly that?

They had gifted humans Free Will. While they were not sacrificial lambs – never that – they were bound to honour the choices of humankind, no matter how horrific those choices were, and knowing the ripple effect of consequence was going to be harrowing, far-reaching and long lasting.

Black Magic Rituals and Blood Sacrifice

In gifting humans Free Will, could we of the Priesthood have anticipated that humans would choose to tear down the very means by which they remained in heaven? No, 'tis not in our Nature to conceive of such things. We knew the Darkness would get a foothold in many souls, but we did not anticipate that humans would be so susceptible to the enticements offered by self aggrandisement that they would tear out their beating heart.

So horrific is this that to grasp the dynamics of it imagine, for a moment, the Darkness whispering to an embryo in the womb, convincing it to sever its own umbilical cord so that it will be able to get what it wants and to become what it wants to become. What do you think the consequences will be for that developing embryo?

With their satanic rituals, the Dark Priests were able to generate the darkest, blackest magical effect on the energy of human existence, directly affecting human consciousness, pulling humans down into the quagmire of selfish, self-centred, lower will and the abyss of Darkness and Separation. Darkness did, indeed, descend, and human consciousness descended into the Darkness.

The Si'il did, indeed, curse humans, just as their version of the Garden of Eden myth tells us, and their curses did, indeed, result in our banishment from the garden of paradisaical union. This was the beginning of our Perpetual Separation from God as Atum.

Closing Our Eyes to the Truth

Whilst ever we close our eyes and our minds to the Truth of black magic rituals and blood sacrifice, those who serve the Darkness will continue to practice them, because these satanic rituals are actively being performed today with alarming and frightening regularity, and the fodder they're predominantly using is children.

You only have to look back at the evil of Nazi Germany to see the kind of power wielded by those who conduct these rituals, because black magic formed the crux of Nazi ideology, behaviour and power. And still does to this day.

I know someone who has been involved, here in Australia, with picking up the pieces of broken individuals who have suffered the horrific abuse of these rituals and survived to tell their tales. She told me the Nazis who survived the punishments after the war migrated to different parts of the world, bringing their horrific rituals and ideologies with them. She wanted me to write up some of the stories, to document and publish them, because she found it too traumatising to do so herself, but I could not get involved. As much as I wanted to, maintaining my focus on my own Work is absolutely imperative.

Satanic black magic and blood sacrifice is real, as is the havoc and the dangerous and destructive energetic effects of these rituals. Closing our eyes to this Truth merely allows it to continue, successfully, to our very great detriment.

The Power of Symbolism

Even on this plane of existence, every destruction of every priesthood and culture that honoured the Ancient Wisdom has always been symbolically powerful, compounding our original choice to exist in Separation from Divine Will and perpetuating our slavery to the Dark Priests and their malevolent agenda.

But the power of the symbolism was heightened in the original destruction of the Elohim Priesthood because we lost our beating heart, our innate Connection, our higher guidance, and we have never fully reclaimed it, even to this day.

The physicality of murder and genocide is powerful enough in its traumatic effects, but the power of symbolism in its interaction with consciousness and its effect on consciousness, particularly as an act of conscious intent, causes unimaginable consequences that ripple out into and through the very fabric of human reality.

When you understand the power of symbolism – the language of Consciousness – then you also understand why it was, and remains, so important to the Si'il that humans participate in that original destruction and all and any and every subsequent destruction of the ancient priesthoods and the Wisdom cultures. This is why they manipulate us into doing their dirty Work for them.

The power of symbolism is purely metaphysical and, so, in our Separated state we cannot possibly be aware of the power of these massacres as symbolic acts or their effects on our collective and individual consciousness and, through consciousness, reality. These acts of destructive intent perpetuate our slavery, allowing the Dark Priests to orchestrate, through us, our collective reality as illusion, which they control.

It's darkly ironic, but what we're doing is destroying the Knowledge and awareness of, and, therefore, the potential Connection with the metaphysical Nature of our Consciousness – the only means we have of fighting back, reclaiming our power, our strings, and reclaiming our ability to Create our own collective and individual realities.

Paving the Way

As is always the case, the power of the symbolism inherent in the destruction of that original Priesthood paved the way for the orchestration of a reality humanity could never have imagined, let alone foreseen. But such was always the intent of the Dark agenda.

The destruction of the Druidic cultures and the Druidic Wisdom and the obviation of Gnostic Wisdom paved the way for the establishment of that most powerful Si'il weapon, the Roman Catholic Church, and the church was then given carte blanche to take European consciousness, and existence, down into the aptly-named Dark Ages.

Likewise, the genocide of the Cathar culture formed a spring board for the greater genocide of the Catholic Inquisition during which it became dangerous to outwardly display even a hint of a religious sympathy that was not Catholic. Thus was any opposition to the church systematically removed, as was any Wisdom capable of countering the church's hold on European consciousness.

The destruction of the priesthoods, whether the original or subsequent ones, always paves the way for a greater descent into Darkness and Separation, not just because the priesthoods are no longer there to be the guiding Light, showing people the way and keeping the Darkness at bay, but because the symbolism of the destruction as a choice and action signals, or screams, our intent, whether we're conscious of it or not, to go it alone, to go our own way. To sever our umbilical cord.

Then, we're theirs. We become like putty in their hands, as we are today, and they are given permission to control our thoughts and beliefs, thus orchestrating a hellish reality.

Choosing Separation

We chose Separation and then signalled this intent by acting on it. We chose Separation because we wanted for ourselves, as egos, turning our backs on the Divinity at the core of our existence. And we continue to choose this way of being even now. We chose and we choose because we want what we want. What we're saying is fuck Atum!

And then we turn around and accuse 'God' of deserting us.

Although only the few participated in the massacre of the original Priesthood, many more apathetically stood by and did nothing to prevent it, and many others did not come to the aid or defence of the Priesthood, choosing to cower in fear instead. Many more were just simply ignorant of what was taking place, all tragic aspects of our existence that persist even to this day.

Unfortunately for us, whether we actively participated or not, so symbolically powerful was the original destruction of the Priesthood that it tore at, and tore asunder, the very fabric of human reality. Yes, I know, this is repeated. I could not repeat it enough if I tried my damndest. The very fabric of reality itself was torn asunder.

Manifesting in the Physical of what is Real in the Metaphysical Realm

Having cursed humanity with the destruction of the original Priesthood, tearing out our metaphysical heart and taking us out of the garden of paradisaical union with Atum, the way was then paved for the Dark Priests to render our banishment permanent.

And that brings me to the second side, or part, of the coin of our original fall from grace. But to understand the dynamics of this second part, we need to know about a vital and fundamental principle of Creation itself.

Humanity is chronically ignorant of the True Nature of Creation, but the Dark Priests, the Si'il, understand it perfectly. Obviously, this gives them carte blanche to use the Knowledge against us.

To make something real, to manifest it, we have to, first of all, make it real on the metaphysical plane, and then it becomes real, or manifests, on the physical plane because what is metaphysical is real, which is how they orchestrate the illusional reality through us. We make it real because we believe it is real.

But, there is a vital principle underpinning this fundamental Truth that is so complex I could devote a whole monograph to it, and probably will. It is this principle that is being used against us so masterfully. Even though what is real metaphysically becomes manifest physically, the metaphysical nature and dynamics of what is manifest still hold true.

Obviously, or perhaps not, this poses absolutely no problem at all when the metaphysical and physical aspects of a thing are not Separate. When, on the other hand, these two become Separate, the metaphysical nature of a thing becomes lost, misconstrued, misunderstood, but this does not, in any way, obviate the metaphysical dynamics at play.

Using the metaphysical plane and metaphysical principles to manifest in the physical is, potentially, a highly dangerous exercise when you don't know what the metaphysical dynamics are, very much like a child playing with a powerful energy generator, thinking it's a toy . . . or a religious artefact, like the Ark of the Covenant.

When we tore the heart out of our existence by destroying the Elohim Priesthood, Separating ourselves from our own metaphysical Truth, we had no way of knowing or understanding that we had made this real metaphysically, so it would, now, ripple out and become manifest physically.

This was, and remains, a vital principle that cannot be circumvented under any condition or circumstance. And, once set in motion, nothing in hell or in heaven or on earth can stop it.

The Story of the Starry Firmament

The interaction of our Sun with the planets and the constellations that surround us was, originally, energetically configured to govern, symbolise, reflect, represent, express, influence, and interact with our higher-dimensional existence.

'As above, so below', remember? We are innately connected to the cosmic clock that surrounds us in ways humanity is no longer able to fully grasp and comprehend. Indeed, we are the energies of the cosmic clock whilst here. If we want to remember we have but to consult the texts of the Ancient Egyptians, because they understood this perfectly.

What the Hermetic maxim is telling us is our story is written in the celestial spheres, always. Put another way, who and what and where and how we are, as Consciousness, is recorded in the starry firmament above us. It is what we are, and we are what it is, always.

The starry firmament, which the Egyptians called Nut, holds the metaphysical Truth of the dynamics at play in the human experience at any and every moment in 'time'. These are the dynamics that are shaping and influencing our past, our present and our future, which, we could argue, are one and the same. It's all really just a collection of moments.

Physical Manifestation and Permanent Banishment

So the tragedy of what we did to ourselves had to be recorded in the starry firmament above us. And so it is.

When we tore out our metaphysical heart, our innate Connection, and fell into a lower-dimensional existence, tearing the fabric of reality in the process, we were then, as we are now, manipulated into effectively destroying ourselves and our sphere, or realm, our environment, in the form we were, and we fell into a lower manifested form, thereby introducing decay and corruption into our existence, thus necessitating an alteration, or adjustment, to the original configuration of the starry firmament above.

Or was it the other way around? What comes first, the chicken or the egg?

I appreciate the fact that this can be difficult to get one's head around, so I will use a very appropriate analogy to facilitate an understanding of what happened.

What occurs when you change the number of neutrons and protons in the nucleus (heart) of an atom by removing some? For the atom to remain in Balance, which it must do if it is to continue to exist, the number of electrons orbiting the nucleus must also be changed to equal the number of protons. But, then, you need to be aware that the atom is no longer what it was; it is now what it is. You've changed its fundamental form.

This is, effectively, what we did to ourselves. From within to without, from inside to outside, from below to above, and from above to below.

Mallona

There was a much-larger planet where the asteroid belt now exists, which the ancients called Mallona. I believe Mallona held the energy of the heart centre, or chakra, of our existence, and when I've seen it in my visions, it is a dry, red-brown planet, covered almost entirely in red desert interspersed with sprawling cities, as if we bled it dry, somehow. And it had a giant fracture in it (a Hermetic wall), like a massive red cliff miles and miles long.

Whether we actually existed on Mallona in our past or whether I'm seeing our earthly existence as it was and symbolically linking it to our heart centre, I'm not sure, but the fact remains. The asteroid belt accurately represents our heart, our heart energy centre, and, therefore, our psyche as it is now – fragmented. Separate and Separated rubble bits.

When we tore out our heart, we fell into an existence in the lower three energy centres in such a way as to lose our connection with the higher three, because the heart binds the lower three and the upper three. In other words, we fell so low into the quagmire of a material existence that it Separated us from our own higher dimensionality.

When we placed our strings in the hands of the Dark Priests, even if unwittingly, we handed them the means to manipulate us into making our own banishment permanent.

Without a heart, we cannot return to heaven. Without a heart, we cannot Create. Without a heart, we cannot restore Creation here. Until something intervenes to end our banishment and restore our heart.

The Heart Chakra

How can, and does, a being, any being, exist without a heart? Physically, no being can exist without a heart, obviously. Metaphysically, without a fully, properly-functioning heart centre in the energy system, a being, any being, splits into two – metaphysical and physical – because there is nothing to bind the two together into one. This is the powerful function of the heart chakra. The heart centre is the seat of the soul, as the Ancient Egyptians well knew.

It's no coincidence that heart disease and heart attacks are so prevalent in this human experience today. Our hearts are broken. Our heart centres are a black hole of fear – a void of nothingness and shadow where a strong sense of Self and a radiating spark of Divinity should reside.

Thus is human existence itself split into two – a higher- and a lower-dimensional version. Humanity does still exist in that original dimension, and now humanity also exists, without our original heart, in this lower physical dimension, which is why we exist in the zombie state. Two dimensions existing concurrently. Touching but not touching. Innately connected but Separate. Interacting but not interacting.

The Barrier of Separation Between the Dimensions

And, because reality bore the brunt, and still does so, reality itself is the barrier of Separation between the dimensions. This is a crucial construct of our existence now.

When we chose Separation so profoundly, and powerfully, the consequence rippled out into our highest reality. The very same energetic configuration of the solar system that surrounds us was drastically, dramatically and momentously altered accordingly. The destruction of Mallona was a direct by-product of our original fatal choice and it was a direct by-product of us putting our strings in the hands of extremely malevolent masters.

Again, whilst human participation and culpability was symbolically vital to the Dark Priests, it was also karmically horrific for us, setting up the eternal and infernal cycle of destruction to which we are subject and within which we are trapped.

Agents of Hell

Know this. NASA is one of many sentinels, or agents, like the agents in The Matrix<sup>10</sup>, guarding the gateway from hell back into heaven – Knowledge. These sentinels are there, in place, to make damn sure we remain in our ignorant hell, or our hellish ignorance.

If we began to see the Truth of the cosmos, we would begin to see the Truth of ourselves, and the Darkness cannot allow this if it is to remain in control. If we understood the cosmos, we would understand ourselves.

If there is one thing the Darkness is good at, it's using smoke and mirrors to generate and perpetuate illusion and delusion, misinformation and disinformation. NASA completely controls what we see when we look out into the cosmos, and how we see it. The increasing prevalence and clarity of the images constantly fed to us by NASA are directly proportional not only to the increasing power of our telescopes but also to advances in CGI technology (computer-generated imagery) and our ability to fabricate digital images.

Not all of it is a lie. On the contrary, some of it is true because mixing Truth in with deception makes it impossible for us to tease the two apart, to sift out the Truth and discard the lies. This is what they've done with our religions and our history very successfully so why wouldn't they employ the same tactic with the cosmos?

The Reconfiguration of Our Solar System

Does the solar system look different in the higher dimension? Yes, it does.

The whole bloody Universe looks different in the higher dimension – the original dimension of our existence. The way we look at the Universe is like looking at the negative of a photograph rather than the actual photograph. The Universe is not full of dark and empty space interspersed with points of brilliant light. It is full of light interspersed with points of intense darkness.

I, and others, have written about the catastrophic disturbances in the solar system, only some of which were caused by the force of the destruction of Mallona<sup>6,7</sup>, much of which is visible to us today, not least of which are the dead remnants of Mallona that form the asteroid belt orbiting the Sun between Jupiter and Mars.

The most significant ripple effect of change occurred with the configuration of the so-called inner planets. They changed. They shifted places. I am not the only one who believes that Venus has not always existed where she does now<sup>4</sup>. I believe we 'brought her with us'. Meaning, I believe she was one of Mallona's moons, catapulted out of her orbit around her parent and thrown into a new orbit.

Pieces of Mallona very likely bombarded this world we're on now when it exploded, and I believe those meteoric fragments still exist today, forming the most sacred relics of some of our religious systems, inherited from more ancient religions. One of the most sacred relics of the Ancient Egyptian Anu (Heliopolis) centre was, I believe, one of these fragments. Interestingly, this fragment – the Ben-Ben stone – was associated with the myth of the Phoenix, which was re-born anew out of the ashes of its own funeral pyre in regular cycles.

Falling From Heaven to Earth

Why is it so important to NASA and the Darkness that we think and believe we exist on the third planet from the Sun? Could it be because this symbolises the manipulation of the third chakra – our self perception, especially as it pertains to our self esteem?

And why is it so important to them that we think and believe we live on a spherical planet? Because we do, I hear you say. Do we? Or is this just more programming and indoctrination, more smoke and mirrors, more illusionary bedazzlement<sup>13</sup>?

If we believe we live on a sphere then we will not notice that our maps are not complete, and we will not become curious about what is beyond our southern border.

In my visions I've seen a relatively tiny portion of the human population travel, or migrate, from Mallona and its moons to Gaia, but, again, this could be purely symbolic, not actual.

Ironically, in being seduced by the possibility of power, we have become powerless. Our strings, as puppets, are in entirely the wrong hands. Our strings are in the hands of masters who are using, abusing, exploiting, harming and damaging us.

The Heart of the Solar System Today

I cannot write about the events of our original fall from grace and not include the little trooper who, through no fault of her own, found herself taking on the responsibility for holding the energy of the heart centre of the solar system after the destruction of the original heart centre.

In place of Mallona – a planet that was physically larger, more dense, and heavier than the inner planets – the manifestation of the heart centre of the solar system is now a small, precious, all-but-dead, red little ex-moon. I cannot see her as a 'him' because, to me, she was and always will be who she is, in spite of our ignorant designations. She is absolutely a victim of our horrifically-wayward choices, very possibly the most tragic victim.

She never was meant to be a planet. She was Created to be a moon, one of Mallona's moons. Under the weight of the very great role she plays and the very great burden she bears, she is absolutely doing the best she can, and she struggles on valiantly. But she is simply not powerful enough, as was always the intent. She wasn't built to be the heart chakra of this solar system.

That she is named for Ares, the Greek god of war whose Roman name is Mars, is tragically symbolic of the Truth that war has raged on and around her, and it has raged around us. Her face, her surface, bears the deep scars of battle, one of which was a direct result of the destruction of her parent. She holds pieces of her parent, Mallona, within her, and two of the remnants of Mallona's dead body orbit her as her own moons, Phobos and Deimos. In that sense, Mallona does still assist in holding the energy of the heart centre.

How can we have failed so completely to learn the lessons of our past mistakes from the destruction of a whole planet? How? Well, it's rather simple, isn't it? Our past has been deliberately hidden from us. We have been robbed of the Knowledge of our true history.

In place of the Truth of how and why we fell from grace is a ridiculous, trite cliché involving a serpent, a woman and an apple – a trite cliché, I might add, that we believe wholeheartedly. We believe it because we want to believe it. The trite cliché is far easier to swallow than the Truth of what we did to our existence and ourselves.

A Realistic Look at Our Belief About Our History

Just take a step back and look at what we believe about our history, generally speaking.

We think our modern civilisation is approximately 5,000 years old. Prior to this (c. 3100 BCE), we think we were primitive, barely planting crops, living in huts made of mud bricks or animal skins.

So primitive were we at this time, according to our current paradigms of thought with respect to our history, that we have written off the peoples and cultures who existed then. We pay them no heed whatsoever. And if any archaeological evidence is found that calls this way of thinking into question we put it down to things like wayward investigations, erroneous and misguided interpretations, or mistakes in carbon dating.

But then, suddenly, out of nowhere, in approximately 3100 BCE or thereabouts, the ancients started building sophisticated structures out of rather large stones – structures that reflected and catered for sophisticated, profound and quite complex belief systems and that demonstrate an advanced knowledge of the cosmos. Most ludicrously of all, we think these people suddenly developed sophisticated systems of writing.

Before this time, we think the ancients painted a few beautiful and communicative but primitive pictures on cave walls. Then, suddenly, as if a divine finger flicked a switch in their collective consciousness, these ancient people thought it would be a good idea to start writing.

And so was our modern existence supposedly born.

Not So Young

If we really stand back for a moment, stop taking so much of our existence for granted, and re-look at the intricate and highly sophisticated systems in and of our bodies, the incredible capability of our minds (not our brains), what we're able to imagine and create, our cognitive abilities (in some of us – many of us don't think at all as far as I can tell, and that's actually not cynicism, it's an authentic observation), our orthodox views of our history don't make sense.

We are not 5,000 years young. We cannot possibly be 5,000 years young and be at our current level of existence, of being. To think we are is nonsensical, extremely limiting, and highly damaging. This one thought is generating within us an inability to see beyond our collective nose, so to speak.

As a species, as a culture, as a society, as a collective experience, we are far, far older than we've been led to believe. Our DNA is far, far older than we realise, and, as such, it contains far, far more information than we recognise. What doesn't help, of course, is the fact that 10 layers of it have been rendered dormant, deliberately forced under the waterline of our conscious awareness.

Using the language of extremely-distorting linear time, our DNA is millions of years old. And, so, our DNA holds millions of years worth of knowledge and experience which we can awaken. We hold the power within us to re-activate the 10 dormant layers of our DNA. All we have to do is awaken our consciousness.

No Time At All

What we see today of the solar system through our telescopes and via the probes supposedly sent hurtling out into space is the consequence in this dimension of something that happened in another dimension.

Time, especially linear time, is an illusional construct of this Separated lower physical dimension, and it is able to be manipulated accordingly. This means nothing to us, really, with our current inability to see beyond the physical universe and our physical realities. We can't actually conceive of a timeless reality. We've lost that ability.

Imagine time as a clean piece of white A4 paper. Now imagine picking up that piece of paper, scrunching it in your hands so that you turn it into a little white ball of paper, and then imagine lobbing it, like throwing a basket ball through a hoop, into the nearest bin. This is what linear time is good for, and this is what we need to do with it.

The destruction of the Elohim Priesthood and the subsequent and consequent destruction of Mallona, both of which happened in separate but wholly connected events in the space-time continuum, did not occur in this physical dimension. This means both of these events did not occur at any time, and, yet, both definitely occurred. Obviously. Because here we are.

The Soul's Necklace

Courtesy of the Separation of this lower 'earthly' material dimension, for most of us, when we come here, into this dimension as it is now, we don't just come once and go, as most of our religions would have us believe. Sometimes, a soul does come in for a specific Purpose*, live a singular life, and then move on, but these souls, like my father, are exceptional and this is the exception rather than the rule.

Usually, when we fall into this Separated dimension, and when many of us fell in this, our fall from grace, the soul takes on a string of incarnations, much like a string of beads in a necklace, with every bead representing an incarnation. The chain that binds the beads of our incarnations comprises the themes the soul Works* with, whatever it is the soul is learning and experiencing, intertwined with the dynamics of karma a soul is obliged to discharge and resolve.

As with a normal necklace, there is an entry point into this dimension, like the first bead in the string, and there is meant to be an exit point, or last bead, both of which, when joined, close the circle and complete the incarnation stream thereby releasing the soul to move on and learn other things in other dimensions.

'Tis very much like a current of electricity passing through us. When we're electrocuted, the current has an entry point and an exit point. This has ramifications for us if the current crosses the heart, greatly disrupting its rhythm, and if we're earthed when the current passes through us. So, too, is it with our energetic sojourn in this physical human experience.

Very Long Necklaces

The number of beads in our individual necklace depends entirely on us. For many of us it takes many beads just to learn and experience, or Work with, one theme, because, in not understanding the Purpose for life itself, we are failing to connect with and understand the Purpose for the bead of any particular life. As such, we're having to form many beads just to fulfil one Purpose.

Unfortunately, such is the state of devolution here now that many, many souls are trapped in their necklaces, forming more and more beads of incarnations so that their necklaces have an entry point but no exit point. As I've said previously, some souls are choosing to be trapped here, in their necklaces – a mindset I find incomprehensible.

Some souls are hell bent on breaking some sort of record for necklace length, or so it seems to those of us in the higher dimensions! How can I possibly know this and speak for the higher dimensions when I am obviously in an earthly, lower, incarnation?

Earthly I may be, but my existence here is no longer earth-bound, or lower. I have awakened and remembered the Truth of my higher-dimensional consciousness.

Whilst the principle of the soul's necklace, with an entry point but no exit point, is absolutely true for individuals, it is, also, tragically, true of us as a collective consciousness. We had an entry point into this lower material dimension but we have not yet had an exit point.

And our entry point was the destruction of the Elohim Priesthood, our innate Connection, and the destruction, however this occurred, of Mallona. Every incarnate soul at that point in the space-time continuum was caught up in that destruction not just physically but metaphysically.

Most of us are still fallen, just as the Garden of Eden myth tells us. We have not yet ascended back into that original existence, that original state of being, symbolised by the garden itself. What this means is we've been in exile for a long, long time, walking the long, long road of consequence.

What Goes Down Must Come Up

In the last series I wrote about Isis and Nephthys – the principles of the guidance of ascent and descent – and I stated clearly what goes down must come back up. What descends must ascend. This is a Universal Law, or principle, that cannot, under any circumstance, be transgressed or violated, even for the Si'il, the Dark Priests.

Accordingly, our fall from grace must be accompanied by a corresponding ascent back into grace, not just individually, but collectively. And the lower we fall, the harder the climb back up into heaven. This, too, is a principle of descent and ascent. The Way up and out of the quagmire of Separated materiality for us is not going to be pleasant, but at some point, we were always going to have to make the climb.

That point is fast approaching. In fact, the preparation for it has already begun.

Nebiru and the Anunnaki

There is one more aspect of our fall from grace I must address.

Although I will largely leave it to you to research them for yourself, I cannot write about our fall from grace without addressing the involvement of the Anunnaki. Much has been written about them so researching them will not be difficult. Suffice it to say they are the 'middle man' between us and the Priests of Darkness, the Si'il.

They were fully culpable in our fall and in Mallona's destruction, and they are working damned hard to keep us in our fallen state. They are not of this world, or realm, but they are real. They are a Si'il culture, so whilst we exist with a black hole of fear at the centre of our consciousness, the Anunnaki are fear. They are bound by it and trapped in it.

Again, if we close our eyes to the Truth of the Anunnaki, if we continue to deny their existence and their systems of control, then we give them tacit permission to continue raping us and our world. Because so they are.

Ironically, they think we are their slaves, but they are wrong. They, too, suffer from an inability to see past the ends of their proverbially-physical noses. Actually, they suffer from the severe disability of being unable to see beyond their fear. They and we are both Si'il puppets, slaves.

We need to realise and understand that the Anunnaki are victims of a Dark, malevolent agenda, just as we are victims of a Dark, malevolent agenda. They are being manipulated, just as we are being manipulated. They are victims of their own choices and actions, just as we are victims of our own choices and actions. They are trapped in powerful dynamics of karma, just as we are trapped in powerful dynamics of karma.

They are victims of Si'il agendas, just as we are victims of Si'il agendas. Only, as puppets, if the Si'il control our strings, and they do, then the Anunnaki are like puppets with Si'il hands up their proverbial asses.

I'll leave it to you to decide which is the worst of these two fates.

The Myth of Lucifer

I believe the Jewish and Christian myth of Lucifer holds the Knowledge of the fate of the Anunnaki world, or realm, Nebiru – the Anunnaki consciousness. Lucifer, the most beautiful of God's archangels, led a rebellion against God and so was cast out of heaven.

Again, we see the same pattern at play that irrevocably altered human existence. What was real on the metaphysical plane became real on the physical plane. The Anunnaki made the same choices, courtesy of Si'il manipulation, and this had unimaginable consequences for their collective consciousness and their world, or realm or dimension. They are soul-less, and so their world, or their realm, has no sun – no radiating soul. They truly exist in hell because they can only manifest their fear. They cannot Create.

Perhaps Nebiru was once beautiful, just as Gaia is beautiful, but Nebiru was cast out, catapulted out of its own stellar neighbourhood thence to traverse the dark wilderness of interstellar space in exile, an exile. Isolated, separated, cut off.

The Anunnaki have imposed their own existence on us – Darkness, isolation, Separation, fear. Only, for us, this is illusional. For the Anunnaki, this is absolutely their reality – the highest manifestation of fear. In being cast out of their solar system, their world, or source consciousness, has no energy source, no Creative force, so they desperately and vampirically harvest energy from other sources.

The portrayal of the alien species in the movie Aliens<sup>14</sup> is, again, an apt analogy for what they are and for their plight. They can only manifest fear because they are fear. They cannot Create so they need other life forms, or others' life force, to do so. So much do they need us that they are panicking. They have, I believe, built their 'particle accelerator' in Cern as a desperate but futile attempt to control reality, manifested form, at the subatomic level, again, to circumvent or sidestep the fundamental Nature of consciousness.

Their connection to us and their attention on us occurred when, so the legend goes, in being catapulted out of their original solar system, their planet, or dimensional realm, or source consciousness, was caught in a gravitational pull towards our Sun. Need. Want. Obsession. Thus does this intruder planet, Nebiru (also known as Planet X), enter our neighbourhood, wreaking untold havoc as it does, in a regular, albeit, lengthy orbital cycle.

This Truth was rather brilliantly depicted in The Fifth Element<sup>11</sup> in the form of the dark planet, or consciousness, hurtling towards Earth through the neighbourhood of our planets, with the intent of utter destruction. And so, too, is the antidote to this darkness perfectly depicted, with a weapon formed of the fifth element of spirit, unleashing the divine Light of Creation. This is our Truth. This is the power we all hold within us.

Singular Consciousness

Do you think we cannot fall lower? Then think again, because we can. And they of the Darkness who think they control us are preparing to orchestrate this even now, and have been doing so for decades.

What does an even lower existence look like? Complete programmed control. Thoughts fed directly to us so that we won't have a thought they can't control or don't want us to have. This is already becoming manifest. But we also saw it in Nazi Germany. Programmed control that still controls the consciousness today of those who underwent it back there.

If you've seen the movie Divergent<sup>10</sup>, and the use and manipulation of the Dauntless faction, complete with vaccine . . . oops, I mean, injection, then you have an idea of what I mean, although the Covid vaccine agenda is only part of the manipulation.

The Si'il and their Anunnaki puppet-slaves intend to orchestrate a 'singular consciousness' here in the human experience. Our choices will, then, like animals, be made within the restrictive bounds of the instincts of our species. We have not come from a caveman existence, but the Si'il intend to take us there, back to the stone age, not with respect to our technology and our physical existence but with respect to our ability to transform and transcend our consciousness.

If they succeed in orchestrating us as a singular consciousness then who controls that consciousness?

So now we have a choice, once again. Higher or lower? At the moment, as zombie slaves, we retain an ability to potentially still think for ourselves. The Si'il want to take even this from us. At a level of our consciousness we know this. It's why we keep depicting the control of machines in our movies.

The Supreme Irony of Our Devolution

The ultimate irony, to me, is that we arrogantly think and believe we are the pinnacle of human evolution, the apex, but we could not be more wrong if we tried our damndest.

From my own memories and from what I've been told transcendentally, we have never been more devolved than we are now. That puts us at the very bottom, not the top, of the ladder of the evolution of human consciousness.

A Wound in the Mind of God

I have to confess, I have asked the question (usually after I've seen another documentary on World War II) why not put a stop to it, our existence, for Gaia's sake if not for ours. Why not just allow us to destroy ourselves once and for all, because we are quite gifted at that? Why not write it all off to lessons learnt, albeit at great cost?

The answer? Because that which was torn asunder must be restored, and until it is, we are and will remain a very great wound in the Mind of God (Atum).

We are a bloody great black hole of fear. And, the very great wound of us and within us collectively is tearing at the very fabric of the Universe, which means we are affecting all souls, not just our own. Congratulations to us. That's no mean or easy feat.

The Battle of Armageddon

What tips the balance in favour of the Darkness in any fight here on the physical plane is humanity itself. It's not even that we have squandered the opportunities Free Will has provided us. We haven't. We've just done, and continue to do, very terrible things with it, time and time and time again, over and over and over again.

Which is why the fight is now being taken away from us physically and is no longer dependent, at all, on human Free Will and choice. The removal of Free Will is the only way we, as a wound in the Mind of Atum, can be resolved.

The religious dogma we've been spoon fed has inverted, or reversed, the dynamics of the battle of Armageddon. Make no mistake, it is not we of the Light fighting the Darkness. It is the Darkness fighting us. And it is their last desperate bid to retain control of human consciousness and the human experience. They have been waging this battle for many millennia, but the battle itself is ramping up.

A vital part of our healing Process is a confrontation with our wounded Truths, our past and current actions, our choices and the consequences of those choices. We must take responsibility for where we are now, for what we have become. Then we can change it.

The Supreme Irony of Our Truth

The ultimate Truth of our fall from grace is a supreme irony. We never were banished from the Garden of Eden. The Si'il and their Anunnaki puppet-slaves never did, and don't, possess the power to banish us. All they can do is trick us into believing we were banished, which they have, very effectively.

It's all smoke and mirrors – the bedazzlement of illusion. Illusion and its hypnotic, sleight-of-hand power is the only power they have. But it's not real. We hold all the True power. We always have.

We have been existing as we are not. All we need do now is awaken the Truth and awaken to the Truth of who we are. Then, those of the Darkness are finished here because their powerlessness will be revealed for what it is, but we will be resurrected and restored.

Enough of these games of illusion. Enough! Let's go home.
