

Monograph Forty-four:

The Dreaming (3)

Resistance, Viscosity, and New Realities

The essence of Creation is more than just powerful. It is power – multifaceted and multi-dimensional power. We have to learn how to Work with this power, once again, yes, absolutely. First, though, we have to be prepared to handle it, because if we're not ready, its energy will burn us. Creation itself takes care of this preparation. But once it starts to flow through us, we experience an unexpected aspect of reality, and we need to be prepared for this, too. Once again, Knowledge will fortify us and make us ready.

The Inherent Beauty of Our True Nature

In writing about the black and white tiles in the previous monograph, I focussed a lot more on the black tiles than I did on the white because that was the nature and focus of the monograph. In doing so, there was a kind of natural negative undertone to the monograph's content and to my explanation of the whole construct of the black and white tiles in the rooms of our psyches.

This negativity could not be avoided because it is always a by-product of Imbalance when that Imbalance so favours the black tiles as it does in our human experience now. But we need to Know, as ugly and as brutal as we can potentially be in this Imbalance, courtesy of being controlled by the black tiles of fear and shadow, and courtesy of labouring under shadowed beliefs about ourselves, when we operate out of the white tiles, the opposite is true. We are radiant, and we are beautiful.

What this means for us is, courtesy of the white tiles radiating the Light of our Divine Truth, our own True Nature as souls, or as higher-dimensional beings, is beautiful. Beauty is, in fact, one of the characteristics of Love and Light, which is why its polar opposite – ugliness – is always a characteristic of fear and Darkness.

The Glory of the Whole

Furthermore, the beauty that is expressed through and radiates from our white tiles is unique for, and to, each one of us. Once set free and restored to Balance, we also therefore inherently set free our own unique beauty, and, then, we each make our own contribution to the glorious whole and the glory of the whole.

Or, if you prefer a different analogy, we each hold our own unique theme in the symphony of Creation here. When we connect with it, give it permission to flow, and start to honour it, we set it free within us, and then it becomes weaved into the whole symphony. If enough of us do this, we really will start to overpower the discordant noise that's been straining the ears of the Universe. Then, we'll begin to turn the chaotic melee of us into the symphony that always was meant to ring out through the Cosmos.

Doesn't that set quite a different tone for us going forward, into this monograph certainly, but also into our future? I, for one, am very much looking forward to our beauty expressing itself in our human existence, although, I can see it already beginning to express itself. I'm looking forward to bearing witness to what we can, and will, Create, and to what our new collective reality will look like.

Validation and Confirmation

Unfortunately, in the state of Imbalance and its corresponding dominance of fear, shadow and ego that currently characterises us, we struggle to believe in the inner beauty that radiates from our white tiles, and, tragically, we even struggle to handle it, which, in turn, results in an internal resistance to it at best, but an outright rejection of it at worst.

This, of course, has a direct effect on our reality. Whilst ever we reject our own inner beauty we continue to Attract people, relationships and circumstances that justify and validate this internal rejection, and, at the same time, confirm our innate ugliness, unworthiness and unacceptability. We continue to beat up on ourselves, in other words.

So, before leaving the negativity of Darkness and its prevalence of black tiles behind for good, at least as far as these monographs are concerned, there are a few more elements of our Imbalance, and the restoration of it into Balance, that we need to Know going forward.

Necessary Preparation

The heavy density we hold within us that's born of the dominance of the black tiles in our collective and individual rooms renders us incapable of holding the radiation of the Light emitted from our inner white tiles without the necessary preparation.

I mean this in the most literal sense. Our bodies, our conscious minds and, therefore, our conscious thoughts have to be prepared to handle the higher energy vibration of Light, and, from personal experience, I can tell you (and have been telling you) the adjustments that need to be made can be, or tend to be, physically and psychologically painful.

Ironically, this dynamic is portrayed perfectly in the biblical crucifixion story, although, as is the intention, the portrayal has been literalised so that the Truth has been, and continues to be, grossly misinterpreted and misunderstood.

When 'Jesus' cried out to 'God' whilst hanging limply on the Roman cross, *my God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me*³, this was not because he had suddenly become the lowly, unworthy sinner that God could only turn away from in utter disgust.

The Effect of Heavy Density

Once again, God, or, more aptly, the Gods, cannot forsake us and never turn away from us in disgust. This is a metaphysical impossibility because we are within them and they are within us. The Darkness and its redaction process deliberately and systematically distorted the Ancient Wisdom as it was expressed through Yeheshua and Mary Magdalene. So successful was this process that the Wisdom itself became weaponised and has been used against us. 'Tis time to set the record, and the Wisdom, straight, once again.

What was being illustrated metaphorically in the original story was the fact that Yeheshua and Mary both took on the supremely-heavy density of a very-great fear, one that tipped the Balance of the white and black tiles to Imbalance within them, as has occurred for the vast majority of us so that we could Work with Perpetual Separation and its associated illusional reality.

In the consequent state of entrapment in illusional materiality that is symbolised with the nailing of Yeheshua to the cross, his own inner Light could no longer penetrate the heavy density, like a thick, dark fog, and radiate through him.

Turning Our Faces Away

Also, vitally, as part of this Truth, in addition to not handling the radiation of Light, this fog renders us incapable of interacting with other people, or beings, including our own higher Selves, for whom Light is radiating. Again, from the personal experience of being shut down and pushed away, sometimes brutally, I can tell you this is what we tend to do when we can't handle Light radiation in others.

We turn our faces away and we push the Light away, because so we must courtesy of the fact that Light in others exposes the shadows within us. And no one likes this kind of confrontation, not even individuals like Yeheshua and Mary Magdala for whom Light radiation is powerful. Remember, too, fear will always defend itself by turning away.

God did not abandon Yeheshua; Yeheshua abandoned God, albeit, ultimately, voluntarily and in the full Knowledge of what he was doing. But so, too, have we all.

Yeheshua's Bridesmaids

In the state of fear, Imbalance and entrapment, we will struggle to handle the Light in whatever form it takes, not just beauty, and from whichever direction it comes into our sphere, inner or outer. Which is why Creation cannot just simply turn the lights back on, figuratively speaking, in our human experience. Too many of us would burn. We need to prepare, and we need to be prepared.

Once again, there's no greater nor any more powerful preparatory ingredient than Thoth's sacred higher Knowledge. He tills and prepares and fertilises the soil of our Consciousness in readiness for the seeds of Ma'at's Truth so that, when those seeds are sown, we easily receive, absorb and assimilate them. Thus nurtured, as they are, they, in turn, change the entire field of us as they grow, making us ready to absorb the Light of Creation that is our birthright, our rightful heritage, and our rightful state of being.

In Yeheshua's and Mary's famous parable of the bridesmaids attending the divine marriage⁴, of whom half were prepared when the bridegroom arrived and half were unprepared, we can think of Thoth's Knowledge as the oil that ensured the divine Light of the lamps (of us) continued to radiate.

Because, this we need to Know. Only radiating bridesmaids can attend the divine marriage of ascension that is currently re-shaping our human experience. Only radiating bridesmaids or bridesmen will handle the energy of it. But there is another reason, too.

No Need to Panic

Remember, fear needs ignorance to survive and thrive, so if we flip this coin of Truth over, fear cannot survive in the Light of Truth and Knowledge, and the understanding, awareness, and the shifts in Consciousness they both generate.

But this means that, as per Yeheshua's and Mary's story, our willingness and ability to absorb and assimilate Thoth's Knowledge, and to accept and be with our own inner beauty, or not, will cause differences within us collectively. Again, as their story illustrates, these differences will, in turn, have a significant impact on our collective reality and the way we each interact with it individually.

Many of us will, no doubt, experience a sense of panic, as I did when I first heard the story, fearing we'll fall into the group of bridesmaids that misses out, rather implacably, too. So allow me to reassure you right now that no one will miss out. The Universe does not leave anyone behind. Ever. We are all, without exception, predestined to return home, to attend the divine marriage referred to in the parable, and to ascend back into heaven.

But at this moment in our evolution, some of us are ready to attend, and some of us have more Work to do before we're able to attend. Some of us are not yet prepared.

The Illusion of Separation

Anyone who does find themselves in the group outside the church, many of whom have already left our unfolding ascension Process (died), is, quite simply, required to continue their evolutionary journey until such times as they are ready. Their preparation has to continue, and this is perfectly normal, natural, and okay.

We all need to remember, too, that ascending now at this point in the space-time continuum verses not ascending now will not Separate us because there is no such thing.

As such, the important aspect of Yeheshua's and Mary's story is not that of the two groups becoming Separated, with one group graduating, being rewarded with an inclusion in some sort of exclusive ascension club, while the other group misses out and is excluded as a kind of punishment. And, of course, is made to feel foolish . . . !

A Paradoxical Contradiction

Whilst I realise now that the idea of this is a big load of utter bollocks, I confess I thought this was the point of the parable when I first heard it as a little girl in Sunday School, and, given my background of punishment, why wouldn't I interpret it this way?

Even back then, as a little girl, I felt the perplexity that I think naturally arises out of this misunderstanding of the parable. There seemed to exist in it a paradoxical contradiction of a god who is supposed to be all-loving, accepting and embracing verses the implied and rather harsh punishment meted out to the poor girls who were locked out, when all they did was fail to think of bringing extra oil.

And why did the other girls not remind them to bring a little bit extra? To me, the group that was allowed in with their extra oil seemed to demonstrate a kind of gloating mean spiritedness. The whole story, as presented in the Bible³, seems, therefore, to be constructed as some sort of test. And woe betide any of us who fail it.

So, once again, I take great pleasure in setting this specific incorrect record straight.

The Fear of Missing Out

To begin with, there was a vital element involved in the construction of the Bible that we need to remember, recognise and always bear in mind when making any interpretations. Stories like these were deliberately redacted and distorted to fit the narrative of Darkness that was being weaved into the Jesus iconification, and into their institutionalised religious systems – a redaction process that could only ever lead to a gross misrepresentation of Yeheshua himself, and of the Truth in his and Mary’s message.

And never more so was this the case than with the concept of the internal divine marriage referenced in the parable. Such a marriage was the very thing the Darkness has always been so utterly desperate to avoid, not to mention terrified of. They have, therefore, been equally as desperate to keep the sacred Knowledge of it out of the public and religious arenas.

We also need to be aware that a significant aspect of both the narrative of the Jesus iconification and the religious construct of their heaven, hell and purgatory after life was the pressure applied to us to generate and foster a fear of missing out, usually because we’ve failed to ‘toe the line’ that was drawn for us by their institutionalised rules. Such a fear renders individuals easily manipulated and controlled, and programmable.

The True Point of the Bridesmaid Story

So, having seen through the Dark manipulation, what is the point being conveyed in Yeheshua’s and Mary’s famous parable?

Well, I don’t know what the story looked like in its original form, but I do know that, for me, it very nicely illustrates a simple but powerful Truth. In this sense, despite its distortion, the story still serves me, and all of us, very well.

And that Truth is the preparation and readiness for the internal divine marriage verses unpreparedness and unreadiness causes the two groups to Create and experience two different realities. I could even add by way of further clarification two vastly-different, contradictory realities, one heavenly, the other hellish.

This Point in the Monographs

Never more so does this dynamic apply to our human experience than it does right now, so the whys and wherefores of it form the crux of the content of this monograph. I could say ‘tis at this juncture in The Monograph Series that we leave the unprepared group behind, but the Truth is we left them behind long ago.

In fact, I know that the outside group, or those not yet ready to ascend, will not and cannot read these monographs. Far from being attracted to them, the people in this group experience, and exhibit, a magnetic repulsion that firmly pushes the monographs away, for the same reason I've just covered. They kind of energetically spit out the monographs before reading even a single word.

As such, the monographs have a rather extreme polarising effect on Consciousness because the Wisdom always does. This means the Dry Sponge Effect of resonance and absorption I've referenced throughout The Monograph Series is only actually one response. The other response is the polar opposite, and we can see the extreme version of it in the campaigns of eradication that litter our past.

So take heart. If you are reading this then the chances are very high that you are already part of the group that is predestined to attend the divine marriage of ascension, one way or another. And, remember, by their fruit shall we know them.

Viscosity

Have you ever seen or performed for yourself that old science experiment for which liquids of different consistencies are poured into a glass or beaker to see how they behave?

You might, for example, pour treacle or honey, water, oil and liquid jelly into the beaker in no particular order. Courtesy of their different consistencies, they don't mix, so they quite quickly form themselves into clear and distinct layers in the glass, with the heaviest or thickest density liquid at the bottom and the lightest density liquid up the top.

The line of demarcation between the different liquids, where they meet and touch but do not mix, is very distinct, too. These lines are points of resistance. If the viscosity of the liquids is vastly different, this resistance does, indeed, tend to become like the firmly-shut door of the church that locked the poor unprepared bridesmaids out in the cold darkness.

The Viscosity of Reality

An internal state of being that knows and fully accepts the radiation of its own inner beauty and is fully open and receptive to higher Knowledge will Create a reality that holds and reflects this radiation and openness as a higher Truth.

On the other hand, an internal state of being that does not believe in, and, therefore, cannot handle, accept or look upon its own inner beauty will Create a reality that holds and reflects this as a lower, wounded Truth. Likewise, an internal state of ignorant being that remains fully resistant to, or even opposed to, higher Knowledge will Create a reality that holds and reflects this as a lower, wounded Truth.

These two realities, one higher and light, the other lower and dense, as polar opposites, are each a different viscosity. As such, they will behave the same way the different liquids behave in the beaker. They can meet and touch, but they will not, do not, and cannot mix.

The Viscosity of Essence

And this is not to say that the manifested forms in these two realities will be different, because this is not necessarily so, although, also, it can be. The viscosity of reality does not refer to the pattern of manifested forms at all. It refers to something deeper, because it applies to reality's essence – the part of reality we cannot see.

Remember, though, that the pattern of manifested forms is always and only ever birthed out of reality's essence – Geb born of Nut. So while manifested form can provide the two groups a common point of reference, at least initially, as their two realities become more polarised, the difference in viscosity will start to impact manifested form, too.

So, for example, at the moment, despite the fact that so many of us are awakening to the Truth of the Light at the core of our being, we are all watching the same unfolding events in the geopolitical landscape of our human experience. This means these events are a part of everyone's reality, one way or another, regardless of the viscosity of our individual realities.

The Differences of Viscosity

What is different for us is the symbolic meaning we attribute to these events and our ability to see through the physicality of them to the deeper Truth underlying them verses the lack thereof, or the literalisation of them. With such different perceptions and perspectives, our responses to them and the effect of them are also vastly different.

So, speaking collectively and generally, one group of us will be terribly afraid by what's unfolding in the events supposedly shaping our world whilst the other group will be almost-wholly unaffected by these events in terms of fear, manipulation, and Dark agendas, although, this latter group will be heart-wrenchingly moved by the suffering, trauma and abuse these events are causing.

Doom, Gloom, Armageddon, and Use-by Dates

The first group will probably be fearfully thinking of the biblical prophecies of doom, gloom, apocalypse and Armageddon whilst the second group will be rolling their metaphoric eyes at the antics of those serving a Darkness that has effectively reached the end of its use-by date in our human realm. We Know that what we're witnessing is the last desperate attempts of this Darkness to reclaim what has already been irrevocably lost – control of human Consciousness.

For me, as part of the second group, I recognise these events are nothing more than choreographed theatre, albeit highly dangerous, destructive and traumatic theatre for some. If there's one thing we now know about the Darkness and all those who serve it, they have absolutely no qualms about meting out the most horrific treatments of the people whom they consider to be nothing more than insignificant pawns in their Dark games. They traumatise without even a moment of hesitation – one reason why the time has come to stand against them.

Of course I want to put a stop to it, but I know the only way to do so is to keep doing the Work I'm doing. I know powerful dynamics of karma are shaping all of these events, and I also know I cannot interfere unless expressly provided an opportunity to do so.

Birth Pains of the New

We all need to remember that the very-great wound expressing itself in the clash of religions and cultures in the Middle East has been suppurating for over a thousand years. In this vortex of swirling shadow dynamics, many souls have become trapped, and in the cesspool of toxicity, turbulence, tragedy and trauma, many souls have, over the millennia, chosen and acted in ways that have caused deeply-lacerating karmic wounds and imbalances that are now being resolved and re-balanced.

What I find very interesting is the cracks of Light that appear through the Dark manipulations, redactions and distortions of the Bible – Truths that somehow survived the censorship process – when ‘Jesus’ speaks about the signs of the end of the Age to his disciples⁵. In my version of the Bible, he explains it perfectly:

*You will hear of wars and rumours of wars,
but see to it that you are not alarmed.
Such things must happen . . .*

Then, after talking about nation against nation, famines and earthquakes, he says:

All these things are the beginning of birth pains.

Birth pains, as opposed to death throes, always herald new beginnings, the creation of new life, do they not? This is not our end, it is our new beginning, but, again, whichever of these – beginning or end – is our reality depends on what is transpiring within us. And, also, which group we’re in, the prepared or the unprepared.

The Side of Light

Of course, the institutionalised religions of our modern era, with their closed-minded and set-in-stone, untruthful paradigms of thought and belief fully empower the unprepared group and their lower, heavy and dense realities. Again, we need to remember that when the ego beast dominates and has control over a conscious mind, the Law of Attraction will operate in such a way as to form an attraction between these people and the institutionalised religions.

This dynamic is the reason why, a long time ago, I wrote about the sides of Light and Dark, and the very great shock many people are going to get when they realise they’ve got the two the wrong way around⁶:

*The battle of Armageddon is not a battle fought
Between the forces of good and the forces of evil.
Nor will it take place at, or in, a physical location on the earth.
Rather, it is a battle fought by each one of us in the confines of our own hearts,
And it is the final, desperate bid of the ego fighting for independence and control.
What irony it is, then, that those individuals who have sought their salvation
By taking refuge in the laws and dictates of organised religion
Find themselves not on the side of Light
But on the side of darkness and death.*

Energies of Alignment

What’s important for us to Know about these two groups and their two different realities is the fact that our responses to these events and the effects of them far transcend emotion and psychology.

Our responses are alchemical, which means our thoughts and thought processes are being stirred at the deepest levels of us, either for good or for ill, and this, in turn, is Creating our realities. For the higher group, the stirring of our thought processes is absolutely inclusive of the higher Knowledge that is coming into our sphere internally and externally. For the lower group, there is only fear that is rooted in chronic ignorance.

So, whilst the lower group is living in fear of the doom and gloom of the prophesied ‘end times’, fearing the annihilation of the human race, the higher group Knows the opposite is True. We are in the Process of ascending into a higher level of existence that has also long been prophesied – the new paradigm of the Golden Age – and we are wholeheartedly participating in this Process in a state of very-eager anticipation.

One of these realities is in full alignment with the reality our Sun is currently birthing whilst the other reality is, now, fully misaligned. What this means is one of these realities has a future and the other does not. One of these realities is no longer sustainable and is destined to fall away, exactly as the lower group fears.

The Line of Demarcation

I will add at this point that the experience of reality for fear-based, ego-dominated, Imbalanced individuals compared with those who are open hearted, heart centred, and heart guided will now become more like the difference between being locked out in a cold, dark, Siberian winter landscape verses snuggling in front of a warm, blazing, healthy hearth fire, sipping hot chocolate.

I’m not being facetious in using this metaphor, and nor am I intending to put the fear of god into us. The difference in these two figurative realities is actually symbolic of how reality is starting to be for us collectively. Some of us are Creating realities of warmth, light and comfort, whilst others are Creating realities pretty-much completely devoid of these.

Where these two basic realities – one light, the other dense, dark and heavy – are still meeting and touching but not mixing, the line of demarcation that is the point of resistance will manifest as behaviours from the latter group directed towards the former group that include shutting down, silencing, pushing away, ridiculing, belittling, and vitriolic attack and criticism, even physical attack. So if you are experiencing all or any of these, now you know why.

Protection from Pollution

For me, as the higher reality has gained power within me, my own closed front door has become a similar line of demarcation to that of the firmly-closed door of the church in the parable, and I have withdrawn from society, hermit like. We of the higher group will experience this because we need to breathe freely in our own energy, and, rather vitally, the withdrawal affords us protection from two elements.

The first element is the corruption and the pollution of the lower reality and its mindsets that infiltrate us and our reality when we interact and engage with the unprepared, lower group, and this is especially so when we are still vulnerable to old mindsets and beliefs. The second element is the friction that is born out of the resistance when the two realities collide – a friction that can be brutal for us.

Tectonic Friction

In fact, the line of demarcation and the dynamic of resistance between realities of a different viscosity will generate a friction that resembles the friction of Gaia's tectonic plates rubbing against each other. Sometimes, as we all know because most of us have experienced it, this friction causes earth tremors, and sometimes the friction causes more-severe and even devastating earthquakes.

In other words, the friction itself will become manifest in our collective, or shared, reality, sometimes catastrophically.

Once again, though, what's important for us to Know is that whilst birthing the reality of the new paradigm, for many of us, not all, the two realities won't just exist side by side in our external environment. They will also exist side by side within us, which means the friction is not just manifested in our outer reality, it is also manifested, and very much felt, in our inner realm – the realm of our emotional and psychological landscape.

Our outer reality will reflect and hold this inner conflict because the two are, in Truth, a seamless extension, each of the other. The trick for us, and the key to releasing the tension within and without is to do the alchemical Work. Recognise the two realities and their source, and then make choices for the higher one thereby releasing the lower.

Line of Sight

Another characteristic we need to Know about the different realities and their line of resistance is the fact that, courtesy of our open-minded receptivity to higher Truth and Knowledge, we in the higher group can see the reality of the lower group, and we can see the dynamics that are forming and shaping it, but the reverse does not hold true.

The lower group cannot see the reality of the higher group, and nor can this group grasp the dynamics we of the higher group are able to see and comprehend. Remember, regardless of how intelligent we are, no one can see beyond the limits of their awareness and understanding.

Putting this dynamic in the context of Yeheshua's and Mary's parable, the unprepared group cannot step into the higher reality inside the church, but nor are they able to even perceive it. They are wholly and soul-ly unable to peer through the fog of fear and ignorance, and to see beyond the masks and costumes of illusionary entrapment.

Mismatched, Misaligned Perspectives

For me, this characteristic is expressing itself in my relationship with the one person who should, by rights, know me best – my mother. Courtesy of the fear dynamics she holds within her, she cannot see me. At all. What I tell her, what I share with her, and some of the powerful synchronicities we've experienced together make no difference to her perspective of me.

Even after sharing my heart with her and baring my soul to her (including reading Monograph Forty to her) she still does not know me. I confess this has hurt, but I also, at times, struggle to comprehend how some of the things I share with her, when she allows me to, make no difference at all. Instead, she reduces everything down into the gravitationally-heavy nugget of her view of me in such a way that confirms the perspective she holds, which, I should add, is not flattering and bares no resemblance to the Truth.

As a result of the Imbalance within her and the fact that she exists in the lower reality, our relationship is, now, characterised by a repeating yo-yo pattern of her pushing me away when the friction gets too intense, pulling herself back together, and then inviting me back in. Yeheshua experienced the same dynamic in his own family⁷.

Inverted Perspectives

In fact, courtesy of the fascinating Truth that lower and higher perspectives are always the inversion, each of the other, so, too, are the perspectives of the lower group upside down and inside out inversions of the perspectives of the higher group.

The reason for this is simple, and I have dealt with it extensively in these monographs, but a quick reminder never hurts, especially in this context.

When we see only the iceberg's tip as demarcated by the waterline of ignorance and unawareness, we take it out of the context of the whole iceberg, and we completely change its symbolic meaning. My mum sees me as she's always seen me, as an ordinary, albeit intelligent, physical person. As such, she sees neither my Light nor the deeper symbolic Truth of my Work, my message, and my writing. And, yes, she is one of those who will not and cannot read these monographs (apart from Monograph Forty).

Good Will Hunting

States of being informed by the ability to be with our own inner beauty and to absorb and assimilate higher Knowledge are not the only aspects of us that are polarising the viscosity of our realities. In significant states of Imbalance, we also struggle with another of the Light's fundamental but powerful characteristics – care.

Do you remember the movie *Good Will Hunting*¹? Will had well-honed defence mechanisms, not least of which was his intellect, and he had equally well-honed and ingrained patterns of defence that he used to push people away and keep them that way. Far from being cared for in and during his upbringing, he'd been shown, taught, exposed to, experienced, and, therefore, knew only abuse, the polar opposite of care.

For all his intelligence, he had to learn what care was, and how to accept and receive it. First, however, he had to unlearn the abusive mindsets and beliefs he'd been taught were all that he deserved. So those same well-honed defences had to be broken down first in order to allow the care offered to penetrate and work its magic, including its own unique and powerful ability to cure and heal.

Re-learning to Receive Care

What was occurring for him on the metaphysical level as both a driver and a flow-on effect of the physical transformation in his psychology was a natural corresponding change in the viscosity of the essence of his reality, from one fed by the heavy density of abusive patterns and their knock-on effects to the lighter density of the energy of care.

The movie portrayed this Process very well, including the way the Process brings into our sphere exactly the right people at exactly the right time in exactly the right way. In order to accept healing and care from someone else, for example, and to trust and make himself vulnerable, a crucial ingredient in the relationship for Will was respect. He could not have interacted so deeply and beneficially with someone he didn't respect.

What was also portrayed very well via his relationship with his love interest was the friction born of the resistance of the two realities rubbing up against each other within him. Initially, she had to approach him because it didn't occur to him to approach her, and then, when he struggled to handle that same friction, he pushed her away, and, finally, once he'd had his break through, he left his old life, and self, behind to go after her.

Patterns of Defence

Although most of us haven't suffered from the kind of upbringing Will suffered through, the same Truths absolutely do still apply to us at every level of our society – individual, familial, group, cultural, collective.

My own upbringing, in being so vastly different from Will's, would be deemed 'normal' by most people's standards. No one would've looked at our family and seen any justification for the kind of woundedness Will exhibited. And yet, as I hope I've conveyed, the level of abuse, although disguised, was still damaging.

As a consequence, my own defence mechanisms and my defensive patterns have not been so different from Will's, although I admit I don't deliberately start fights. I did, however, suffer from a decided tendency to take refuge from my environment by rigidly staying in my head, protecting my heart, and hiding behind my intellect.

Patterns of Abuse

But I see patterns of abuse, often brutal abuse, in every facet of society – in our religions, in medical systems that are forcing highly-addictive drugs down our proverbial throats, in education systems that are teaching flagrantly wrong, harmful paradigms of thought, in policing practices and legal systems that are protecting and perpetuating Dark agendas like the systemic abuse of women, in our interactions on social media, in our substance addictions.

I see it being overtly perpetrated by our governments, corporations, industries like the publishing industry, and, especially, by the financial institutions that control our economic systems. And, of course, I see it in the conflicts occurring in the geopolitical landscape of our world.

Normalising Patterns of Abuse

Another ‘normal’, acceptable aspect of our society – reality tv – very much reminds me of Rome’s coliseums, into which we threw our own to wild animal packs and gladiatorial fights to the death for entertainment, as *The Hunger Games*² portrays so accurately and powerfully. Did we get the message and heed the warning in this movie franchise?

As the old analogy of our frog and his boiling water illustrates, patterns of abuse have become so normalised we don’t recognise them for what they are, so we don’t question them, we don’t push back against them, and we are so used to them that we, too, like Will, now have to unlearn them first before we can replace them with thought patterns of Love, Light, beauty, care and compassion, thereby changing the viscosity of our individual realities to match our newly-emerging collective one.

Old patterns of abuse are, therefore, also no longer sustainable, and this is resulting in a two-fold effect of abusive systems starting to fail and crumble and the energy of abuse coming back on anyone, quickly, probably brutally, and painfully, who still insists on and persists in putting the energy of it into our collective Quantum Field.

Looking Upon the Face of the Gods

When we really stop and consider our situation in the Light of these Truths, surely we must recognise the extraordinary situation we find ourselves in, because what this all effectively means is we must be prepared to handle the radiation of Love, both from within and from without. Love is not just our rightful heritage, it is also our rightful state of being. So putting this point I’m making bluntly, and to reiterate, we have to be prepared to handle the Truth of ourselves. Or, more aptly, our Selves.

We have to be prepared to handle Love, let alone express it. We have to be prepared to handle our own beauty, let alone radiate it. And we have to be prepared to handle care enough to receive and embrace it. Such is the seriousness of our situation.

I am not, of course, referring to Love as a trite religious cliché, nor as a trite romantic cliché. I’m referring to authentic Love. And since authentic Love is the True Form and Face and Nature of God, or, if you prefer, as I do, the Gods, we cannot look upon their faces without the proper preparation.

Love is Power

I cannot overstate or exaggerate just how tragic this is for us. But I strongly suspect, for many of us, I don’t have to because we can see for ourselves just how serious and precarious our situation is. As I hope you now Know after reading the preceding monographs, the antidote is within us, and the antidote is Love.

Far from being a trite cliché of any sort, Love is power. When we sing or write about the power of Love, or celebrate it in our creative expressions and endeavours, again, we’re not singing in or writing about clichés. We Know, deep down, that, just like Will, Love is a power we’ve lost the ability to fully comprehend, express, Work with, experience, and radiate.

Again, putting this very bluntly, because so I must, and speaking collectively, what this means for us is Love is an energy we are, in our current state, in no fit state to handle.

An Electrical Circuit

Individually and collectively, we are like electrical power grids, with their circuits and vast networks of wires. The networks of us have been holding and carrying an old, defunct, often clunky, slower, much-lower frequency. But we are, right now, undergoing an upgrade that will, once complete, require us to carry, and handle, a new current of a vastly-different, much-higher frequency.

Normally, an old network such as ours would need to have its wires and circuits completely replaced. But we can't swap out our conscious minds and psyches for new ones, and nor can we swap out our nervous and hormonal systems for newer, more advanced and compatible upgrades. So we and our bodies have to make the required significant shifts and adjustments as the new current comes in, which it has been doing for the last couple of decades.

Wear and Tear

The more resistance there is within us to the new current and way of being, whether consciously or unconsciously, the more friction will be generated along the wires of our nervous systems as the current tries to Move, the more wear and tear will occur for us. The load on the nervous system, and the resulting damage from the wear and tear, manifests as neurological dis-eases.

Nerve damage and degeneration, as I know from personal experience, is inordinately painful and, in my opinion, quite scary. It burns. But so, too, does the higher-frequency energy burn when our nervous systems haven't yet made the required adjustments.

On a practical note, learn from my experience and take my advice. Make sure you monitor and maintain the level in your body of vitamin B12. The nervous system greatly benefits from the support given it by this essential vitamin.

The Art of Contemplation

The transformation, or, even better, transmutation of the viscosity of abuse into that of care has to start with each one of us, within each one of us. We cannot wait for others to care for us first before caring for ourselves because, quite simply, it doesn't actually Work that way.

If you apply your contemplative ability to your immediate environment and your social network, and think back over the recent past, you might be surprised by how much and how subtly you 'go with the flow' and self compromise to keep the peace, avoid ruffling feathers, upsetting apple carts, making waves, or drawing unwanted attention to yourself.

How many of us are putting up with bad or even toxic work cultures because we have 'financial commitments'? Or accepting woefully inadequate and unacceptable medical care because the 'doctors know better'? Or allowing family members to 'get away with murder'?

just because they are family? Or putting up with friendships we don't actually enjoy because we don't want to earn for ourselves the label of snob or bitch, or appear rude? Or following behavioural trends just because everyone else is doing it and we don't want to separate ourselves or stand out?

Transmuting Abuse into Care

If I was to give us some collective advice, I would recommend that each of us make time for ourselves and spend an elongated moment in stillness and silence to ask ourselves a most vital question: do you care for yourself?

If your own answer is 'no' then hold within you the intent and make a promise, or a vow, to yourself to turn it into a 'yes'. If your answer is already 'yes' then hold within you the intent and make a promise, or a vow, to yourself to rescind your permission for the patterns of abuse to continue to operate within and around you.

Then, allow the Process to Work through you. Listen to, heed and follow your heart, your intuition, your gut instinct, and your inner Knowing to navigate your way through the minefield of this transmutational Process. Given the energies coming into our human realm right now, you will, most probably, be put to the test almost immediately because your heart and, therefore, your reality will be very responsive.

Actually, your heart might jump for joy, and you might even feel it physically jump in your chest.

Whilst you will need courage to go against the tide of trending behaviour, attitudes and mindsets, I can promise you that every time you choose self care over abuse, you will put the beautiful, powerful energy of care into the Quantum Field of our collective human Consciousness, and this energy will ultimately make it easier for others to make self caring choices and take self caring actions, too.

Production-line Realities

Yet another characteristic that demarcates the higher, or inside, group from the lower, or outside, group is the freedom from illusion's rules, recipes, norms, trends, standards, and precedents that we express and experience – a freedom that allows us to Create reality anew and afresh, and this will eventually affect, shape, influence, and then govern the pattern of manifested forms.

Put simply, we break free from the cloned, production-line illusional reality with its exacting behaviours and specs.

To say the lower group cannot handle this is, in my experience, a vast understatement. In remaining implacably bound and entrapped in and by those very same rules, recipes, norms and standards, they still fully exist in and operate out of the illusional reality, so they will, and can only, measure and assess us against its rules and recipes. They will, then, typically, find us weird and wanting, deeming us inadequate, unacceptable, or, worse, chronic failures.

Tarred and Feathered with a Different Brush

From personal experience, I know the kinds of labels we incur, or are tagged with, include dysfunctional, indulgent, wayward, irresponsible, mentally ill, disjointed, snobby. We are often deemed to be suffering a break down, even a nervous one, or going through a midlife crisis, depending on our age.

And there's nothing we can say to defend ourselves against these harsh and unfair criticisms, certainly not in a way that has any sort of positive effect. There's nothing we can do to prove them wrong, and there's nothing we can do or say to change their minds or their mindsets.

Just as we need to learn to care for ourselves first, we need to recognise, for ourselves, that we can no longer be measured against, or by, the rigid definitions and requirements for success and acceptability that characterise the illusional reality. Far from violating illusion's rules, we are completely operating outside of and beyond them as a frame of reference. We need to find a way to give ourselves permission for this dynamic to operate within and through us, and, as I know full well, this, in itself, is not easy to do.

The Emerging Butterfly

If we are still vulnerable, like the butterfly emerging from its cocoon, not yet able to spread its wings in flight, we will struggle not to take these labels, accusations and criticisms on and believe them. So until we do transcend the old way of being completely and authentically these labels will sting. This is part of our internal struggle to allow the new reality to be birthed.

The important aspect of the attacks, judgements and labels the lower group throw at us, which we of the higher group need to bear in mind, is the fact that, far from being right, or justified, they are threatened. But whilst we know this, we cannot communicate this Truth to them. They won't allow it. They will not hear it.

How does a butterfly communicate to a caterpillar what it can see and what its experiences are? So vastly different is the butterfly's new frame of reference compared with that of the old, the caterpillar's, there is no way the butterfly can explain or convey the new reality in a way the caterpillar will comprehend, let alone connect with.

Once again, we need to remember they exist in their reality, and we exist in ours. Their reality is their reality, and we cannot change this. We cannot change the viscosity of their reality, we can only change the viscosity of our own.

Witch Hunts

We have to remember, too, that the vastly different perspectives and experiences of the two are not the only reason for this inability to connect and communicate. The caterpillar is still dominated by fear and ego and so does not want to surrender its frame of reference. It will, therefore, defend and protect its old frame of reference, and its illusions, to the death if necessary.

We should be grateful that the old-fashion witch hunts are no longer acceptable, except that there are, of course, many more ways than the obvious one for the egoic horde to target and come after us. This is why so many of us have been Working in such a way as to be shrouded in a protective cocoon of secrecy and hiddenness, for which, I, for one, am grateful.

Energetic Changes

The energy we all give out is not something any of us can see, unless we have strong abilities to do so. Behaviour, choice, and action, on the other hand, are seen. As such, regardless of the group we're in, we all need to Know that we are starting to respond, one way or its opposite, to the dramatic and powerful changes in the energy we of the higher group are giving out, or radiating.

But whilst we of the higher group Know this, the lower group doesn't Know, and it refuses to Know. So it can only respond to what it sees physically.

This group will feel increasingly uncomfortable around us, but being in a state of ignorance, they rarely consciously recognise this in themselves, so they react without really even knowing why, and the only way they can justify the reaction to themselves is to focus on that which they can see – our behaviours and actions, or, the way we present physically.

This, too, lays the blame for the discomfort they feel at our feet, making it our fault, which, in turn, facilitates them avoiding personal responsibility for their own internal responses and reactions.

Inherent Challenge

They attack because they are responding to the inherent challenge in, and of, our changing energy and its corresponding, newly-manifesting reality. So they need to shut us down, put us back in the illusional box with which they are familiar and comfortable, and from which they cannot break free. They want the challenge, and its reflection, to go away.

Ironically, part of this attack, in my experience, is aimed at the emerging characteristics and expressions of the radiation of our beauty, like passion, depth and intensity, which they deem, and treat, as ugly.

I've been told, either verbally or energetically, so many times by people who are supposed to love and support me I've had enough of your passion for now or I need a break from your intensity. As for depth, I was once told by an insightful person, not as a criticism but, rather, in admiration, ooh, it must be lonely down there. My response? I smiled, genuinely amused, and told him I was definitely alone but not lonely.

Attraction, Retraction, Detraction

As the higher, lighter reality is empowered within us, and, in direct correlation, the lower, illusional reality breaks down and falls away, also within us, the Law of Attraction starts to operate around us in an overt way, and the power of it can leave us breathless at times.

Again, we need to Know that Attraction has a positive form, with like Attracting like, but it also has a negative form, which manifests as magnetic repulsion.

While this repulsion will definitely start to apply to cultures, like familial and work cultures, to things like social media, to behaviours around drugs and alcohol, and to different foods, never more so does it apply than in the context of relationships. In my experience, people either quietly or not-so-quietly retract themselves from us, disappearing or dropping out of our lives, as if we've grossly and irretrievably offended them. But so, too, do we find ourselves withdrawing and doing the same to them.

While this can absolutely feel negative, hard, uncomfortable, and hurtful, ironically, this is the Law of Attraction Working for our deeper and highest good, because the Truth is these relationships no longer serve us. On the contrary, they detract from the value of what is emerging within us. We need to Attract new relationships that reflect our Self value back to us, and that resonate with that same Self value.

Working with Our Own Themes

In waging our own internal battles to birth the new reality and dissolve the old, we will, I suspect, each have our own themes we'll Work with and focus on. These form part of the unique mandate of our Destiny, certainly, but they also form part of the specific theme we're holding as part of Creation's symphony. Focussing on the different elements of the ascension Process facilitates us concentrating our alchemical abilities to transmute the straw of that particular element into gold.

I also suspect we're all going to have different struggles, or, rather, struggles with different elements. Some of us will find it easier to deal with some elements that others of us might wage epic battles to overcome, master or transmute.

For me, ordinariness, as the essence of the lower illusionary reality, has been one such element, and battle. So much have I waged an epic struggle with it that I would say ordinariness, and its associated masks, cloaks, and costumes, should not be underestimated.

The Impenetrability of Ordinariness

When revelations of who I am as a higher being have come through, especially in the beginning, I needed years, and lots of processing, to 'come to terms' with them, absorbing, assimilating them, believing them, giving them permission to be, and, then, standing confident in them as my divine Truth.

This was certainly my experience with anything ordinary people do not engage with, like the transcendent, shamanic nature of my writing and my visions, my ability to Work with the Dreaming to access memories from previous lives I've lived, and my constant telepathic connection with the higher beings with whom I am Working.

The reason I took so long to allow these facets of my Self to be, and to believe in and embrace them, is the fact that they struggled to penetrate the viscosity of heavy density that characterises illusion's ordinariness. I believed I was ordinary.

Ordinary Girl, Extraordinary Essence

Quite often, as part of the resistance, I would talk myself out of the revelation with thoughts like this doesn't happen to ordinary people like me, and this was exacerbated when I was doing very ordinary things, like catching the train to my ordinary, mundane job. Very often, I wouldn't just resist higher revelations, I would reject them so fully and implacably that I would spit them out . . . or try to, because they always returned.

I even felt the dense viscosity of the ordinariness within me, which is why I describe internal effects following revelations as feeling like I'd been stuffed with cotton wool. I wrote about it whilst waging my battle with it as a way of asking the Universe, and my higher companions, how to reconcile the ordinary girl in the mirror with the extraordinary essence of what was coming forth⁸.

The answer? They cannot be reconciled. *Only one can be, such that the other must cease to be*⁸.

The Ordinary Computer Programmer

I think *The Matrix*⁹ portrayed this dynamic perfectly. Despite his compulsive seeking, Neo presented as an ordinary computer programmer because this was what he believed about himself, and how he believed himself to be.

And how, then, is an ordinary computer programmer supposed to believe and come to terms with the Truth that he is the One who is able to change the Matrix at will? Even as an observer, when I first saw the movie I found myself thinking how does Morpheus know he's right, and what if he's wrong? And, how the hell is Neo supposed to make the mental adjustment?

The answer? Layer by layer. Little bit by little bit. Piece by piece. Experience by experience. Under the guidance and governance of Process. And with a lot of wonderful, viscosity-altering communications from our Dreaming Realm.

Birthing the Extraordinariness

Because, come to terms with our higher Truth we must, so each and every epiphany, revelation, intuition, and the transcendent Knowledge that comes through with respect to ourselves will birth the extraordinariness out of the quagmire of ordinariness if we do the Work to accept, absorb and assimilate them.

In my experience, this, in turn, drastically and dramatically alters both the viscosity of our reality and its ability, or lack thereof, to mix with the dense and dull essence of the ordinary lower reality. In other words, every revelation of higher Truth we experience changes us in such a way as to further separate us, at least here in our human realm, from the lower, unprepared group.

For me personally, ordinariness and its polar opposite, extraordinariness, are such a vastly-different viscosity as to absolutely generate the firmly-shut door of resistance between the two. They really do not mix.

Reflection and Revelation

We also need to remember that whilst ever we wage the internal battle within us, our reality will hold and bounce back to us the battle itself and the two realities, together with the friction born of the resistance of these two colliding within. So what we invariably find is the labels and attacks from the lower group are themselves reflections of this friction.

Interestingly, individuals in the lower group will be in the landscape of our reality in the first place courtesy of this same dynamic, which is another reason why these people fall away under the governance of the Law of Attraction as the higher reality gains power over the lower.

But as the one emerges victorious over the other, what remains is the reflection of Light, beauty, Knowledge, inner Knowing, and care. Then, our reality reflects back to us the divine Light of our highest Truth, but it does so in such a way that it can be seen by others, whether or not those others have the eyes to see.

We are, then, revealed to ourselves, no longer concealed by the dense fog of fear, ignorance and illusion. This is the role of reality, with its bounce-back function, transmuting from the reflection of lower density to the reflection of higher, and it really is a whole new and very wonderful experience.

The Power of the New Reality

As the scales of our Consciousness start to tip in favour of the new reality, we are able to birth, or manifest, specific forms out of the purity of its higher essence, and these, in turn, hold an energetic power and reflection that further tips the scales the right way.

In other words, the higher reality empowers itself.

For me, as an example, this manifestation has occurred powerfully in the form of a new engagement with YouTube and the many sites that are Working through it. After feeling as if I was walking alone through a desolate wilderness, the sites I've engaged with all of a sudden started providing me with a very real hand-holding support and encouragement, and a perfectly-synchronistic confirmation and validation, including the use of identical metaphors and nomenclature.

Guarding Against Negativity

I found I had a physical, as opposed to a purely metaphysical, community and communion to draw on¹⁰. This reinforces the notion of Creation's symphony, too. We each have our own themes, but the symphony has greater themes that our individual themes feed into and form a part of, and they do start to weave together.

At the beginning of the year, when I was Processing that god-almighty sunspot of fear that appeared on the Sun's face, which was very stressful, the next-door-neighbour's cat started sitting in my garden outside my lounge-room window. I was concerned about this at first because I thought she might scare away the little honey eaters that love the flowers in the tree under which she was sitting.

But the YouTube algorithm brought in a clip that drew my attention with the question: Is a cat sitting outside your window? Naturally, I clicked on it, and was grateful for the transcendent information it gave me about the ability of cats to guard against and process negativity through the sound vibration of their purr. Knowing I needed all the help I could get, I welcomed her and let her sit. That Process had a definite beginning and a very-definite end, so when it was over, she stopped coming to sit in my garden.

These experiences are micro-examples of what reality is able to provide us more broadly, through a myriad of different manifested forms, not just YouTube sites.

The Guidance of the New Reality

By way of introducing my next point, I'm going to quote myself directly from Monograph Forty-two, but I'm going to make some critical alterations in doing so. In the original version of this paragraph, I was talking specifically about my inner vision and the restoration of it, but now I'm going to use it to refer specifically to the new reality:

Decades of hard Work were required for me to reconnect with my ability to Work with reality as it's able to hold my visions, to open my mind to it and to the interpretative ability of my inner sight and intuition, to give it permission to be, to guide me, to inform me, to become the basis of my cognitive ability, to pay it heed, to recognise what it's telling me, to learn to speak its language, and to give it credence where and when it's dealt with those aspects of us that are well beyond the limits of our current experience, knowledge and understanding.

I've said before but will repeat in this context, reality in its Truest form is a rather excellent guide, and a wonderful repository, or conduit, for transcendent information and for Thoth's sacred Knowledge. Once restored and freed from the bollocks of illusion's constraints and limitations, the Ladies of Process, Isis and Nephthys, are able to use it like the maestros they, and we, are.

Restoration

Speaking of restoration, there is one more powerful and important way viscosity is important. When we put ourselves back together, recognising, paying heed to, and honouring all the different and beautiful aspects of our inner realm, our reality becomes a seamless extension of it. And, then, we live a simple but powerful Truth.

Creation makes absolutely no distinction between our inner realm and our outer reality because there is no distinction. They are so seamlessly connected, courtesy of being the same viscosity, they are not just extensions, each of the other. They are actually the same.

Do you remember I told us in the fourth series that Isis is birthing a new reality? She's rolling out a reality that's like smooth silk, one that's able to hold the vibrancy of Creation's alchemical magic and its dreaming language. Well, this is how she's doing it. Very simply, she's restoring herself, bringing herself out of exile, and, therefore, of course, she's resurrecting her Lord, Osiris – Creation's power and its current. Or, its current of power.

The Seamlessness of the Circuit

The restoration of the essence of reality means we are able to see what it does, and what it looks like, when it holds the magic of alchemy, and the alchemy of the magic that is the very stuff and substance of our Creative ability. And then, we're able to see and experience how beautifully seamless the circuit of our Consciousness actually is.

The circuit itself consists of all the facets of our Consciousness: our conscious awareness, intellect, vision, subconscious, imagination, and reality. And the current of Creation is able to flow through all of these seamlessly when the viscosity of them matches, and when the viscosity of them matches Creation itself.

3-d Printing of Internal Images

Then, we are able to pull an image from our imagination, through all the facets of our Consciousness, before finally manifesting it, in physical form, sometimes even as if it has been 3-d printed, like a direct translation. These experiences should feel surreal, given our entrapment in illusion's ordinariness and ignorance, but with preparation, they feel wonderfully normal and natural. They really do take their place in the flow of Creation's current.

Furthermore, the fact that all of the facets of our Consciousness have become the same viscosity means they are on the same proverbial page, drinking from the same proverbial cup, perfectly aligned, so they each make the same correct interpretation of the symbolic imagery of our Consciousness, whether in our outer reality or our inner realm.

The Murian Reality – an Ancient Wrong Being Made Right

There is one more important aspect regarding the new reality and its higher, lighter viscosity that we need to Know. In our very ancient past, when we collectively fell from grace, the egoic brutality of Atlantis rose up against Mu (also known as Lemuria), tore out its beating heart, and defeated it. I, and many others, have written about the legend of Mu in more detail⁶, so I won't re-tell the story here.

Suffice it to say, Mu and its lighter-viscosity Murian Reality is our rightful state of being and our rightful heritage. It is what we were originally Created to be. As more and more of us birth the new reality Isis is restoring, our collective reality will, also, resonate more and more with the Murian Reality, and we will naturally, or organically, re-merge with Mu itself, because it has never ceased to be.

Mu and its reality is, in fact, the Phoenix that's arising anew out of the fall, the catastrophic failure, and the destruction of the Atlantean Reality. We will no longer find it necessary to talk about the tearing of the veil between the dimensions because there simply won't be a veil to tear.

We will be able to walk in the Murian Reality, but the souls incarnate in Mu will also be able to physically walk in our reality, because there won't actually be a difference between our reality and theirs.

The Viscosity of Joy

Remember, Mu did not abandon us. We abandoned Mu. And it has been waiting patiently for this time in our evolution when we will, once again, return home to reclaim our rightful heritage. Likewise, the Fae Realm (or Faery Realm) is a dimension of our human Consciousness, so we will, too, be restored to the Truth of it and its beautiful reality.

I can tell you, because I Know, that for the Fae and the Murians – the highest Truth of our human existence – joy is our greatest and most nourishing nutrient. Do I need to tell you there's no joy in slavery?

Since I do not want to end this monograph on a negative note, I will end it by saying instead, the time is upon us for us to re-write our human story. Come, join with me in Creating the new reality that's fully born out of the viscosity of joy's essence. Let's weave the fabric of our whole human experience out of joy. Just because we can.
